We Talk Fast, Go Slowly

A New Train Idea

Germany Has Brains

N. M. Schenck's Rule

By Arthur Brisbane

AL WILLIAMS, one of our finest young American fliers, recently of the American Navy, said yesterday "the United States talks fast and flies slowly. England flies fast and talks slowly."

Britain holds all the speed records that have any real meaning: The airplane record, 357 miles per hour; the automobile record, 246 miles; the motorboat record of over 100 miles, and motorcycle record of over 150 miles. And they have achieved these records in "hard times." The British manage to do what they have to do.

Incidentally, the British are far ahead of us in the construction of airplane and other engines. They have developed horsepower in their engines by methods concerning which we know nothing. For instance, they took a 850-horsepower engine, weighing 1340 pounds, and got out of it 1900-horsepower, the engine weighing less than one pound per horsepower.

Perhaps our big oil companies could tell us what the British put in their engines to get such horsepower and make them go so fast.

This year the Italians, British and French will compete in the Schneider Cup race for the world's speed records. Uncle Sam, who invented the airplane, will be absent. What's the matter with us? Are we getting too old, fat and rich?

The important news today, that will be important 1000 years hence, is the news of a really fast railroad train, designed by Prof. Wiesinger, in Switzerland.

Its coaches, made of light aluminum, will weigh only three tons each, and be driven by airplane propellers, will travel 223 miles an hour.

Does a train would take passengers from New York to San Francisco in 14 hours. You will get such trains in the United States eventually.

The German yesterday, with 60,000 looking on launched their first so-called "pocket" cruiser, a fighting ship with which Germans demonstrate their superior engineering and military intelligence.

It is a small vessel, much smaller than some that France and the United States are building, but far superior in every way. A great number of small compartments enable the new cruiser, named Deutschland, to resist the discharge of several torpedoes or mines. Six 11-inch guns, mounted in armored triple turrets, have a range of 17 miles. This German ship could destroy every existing 10,000-ton cruiser, with no danger to herself.

With Diesel engines, the new German fighting unit, more brilliantly designed than any other in the world, has a cruising range of 10,000 miles.

We have the money, and France won the victory, but Germany seems to have the brains, in this case, most important of all.

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's Incorporated, which operates hundreds of theaters here and abroad, and of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, one of the two greatest producing companies, announces a policy that deserves the strongest public approval.

Mr. Schenck will not permit either of the two companies to exhibit or make any films inspired by advertising interests. He says: "Screened advertising is a menace to the motion picture industry and should be barred by all first-class theaters."

Good advertising is admirable, but disguised advertising or open advertising on the screen is indefensible.

The "Elgin Marbles," pride of Great Britain, most precious possession of the British Museum, really belong to Greece. Lord Elgin, for whom they are named, when British ambassador to Constantinople, long ago, packed up the marbles in Athens and carried them to Britain, a kind of piracy then justified.

Now the British consider returning the Elgin Marbles to their old place on the Acropolis at Athens, to prove how honest the British are.

It is a noble impulse. On the other hand, for one person who would see the marbles at Athens, a hundred will see them in the British Museum. And returning stolen goods of that sort might be a dangerous precedent.

We get many of our new ideas from Europe, and here is one. Germany now numbers towns and cities, to save mistaken and time. Dortmund, for instance, is number 32. The new system will keep letters, freight and express from going astray.

GANG WAR IN BOSTON IS REVEALED

Two Factions Struggle to Control Liquor, Drugs and Stolen Jewels Rackets

By THE MASKED REPORTER

Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.

Gang war has struck Boston and New England.

A violent but dark struggle for control of three prize rackets of the district—liquor, the stolen jewels market, and 'dope' smuggling—has been waged along the coast from Maine to Long Island Sound for the past six weeks.

Public rumblings were first heard through recent federal liquor seizures. These were part of the strategy to drive out one band of outlaws and capture New England for a new combine.

I have gone into the underworld and have learned the inside workings of the two deadly bands. I have learned just who are the ringleaders, and, even

MERCURY SOARS TO 85 DEGREES

Boston had a taste of real summer weather today. The official temperature at 2 p. m. was 85 degrees, with the mercury still slowly rising. The humidity was 58, slightly above normal.

Today's hot spell came within four points of the record of 89 established on May 20, 1887.

The mercury began to descend slowly later in the afternoon and at 4 o'clock stood at 83 degrees.

Straw hats blossomed on male pedestrians. It was the kind of a day that stirred longings for bathing suits and vacations.

Thousands visited the beaches. Police estimated that more than 20,000 visited Marine Park and the beaches along the Strandway from South Boston to Dorchester.

Traffic was so heavy that Acting Capt. Frank H. Thompson assigned an extra detail of traffic officers for duty at City Point.

Throngs visited the new L st. bathhouse, which is not quite finished. They watched the workmen and longed for the opening day. Quite a few took dips at City Point, Winthrop and Revere.

She sobbed loudly when her acquittal was announced.

OFFICE SAFE AT STATLER LOOTED IN DAYLIGHT

Bold Thieves Cut Away Grill to Cage as Cashier Is Away at Lunch

Almost within sight of scores of guests and employes, in broad daylight this noon, $15,000 was stolen this afternoon from the cashier's safe at the Hotel Statler.

The cashier was at lunch at the time and entrance to the cage of his office on the mezzanine floor was unguarded, except by the grill, with wire-cutters.

The thieves missed a $16,000 payroll and $1400 in loose bills, a late checkup showed. The payroll was in envelopes ready for distribution and the loose bills were near the money that was stolen.

Approximately $1100 in silver was left behind because the pillowslip in which this money was kept ripped open as the thieves took it from the safe, spilling the coins over the floor.

Entering the main lobby, which was crowded, the thieves located the unlocked safe within easyhot of a score of girl employes and fled, it is believed, by a rear stairway.

FINGERPRINT FOUND

Passing the meeting rooms of the Professional Women's Club, they are believed to have mingled with members of the Rotary Club leaving their luncheon.

The Columbus ave. entrance was open today especially for the Rotary Club, and it is believed this was taken advantage of by the thieves, as the rear stairway leads to that door.

'JAKE THE BARBER' SAYS PRINCE OF WALES GAVE HIM A DRINK

SURRENDERS IN SEVEN MILLION STOCK DEAL

Long-Hunted Racketeer Says He Won Fortune in One Night, Gambling

Chicago, May 20—John Factor, admittedly the smoothest barber who ever graduated out of Chicago's West Side, surrendered to federal authorities today on the charge that he duped British investors out of $7,000,000 in a huge stock swindle.

He announced he would plead not guilty and fight extradition to London, which has been requested by British authorities.

CLEANING UP FORTUNE.

Following his surrender, Factor had his fingerprints taken for the first time in his life. Law partners of U. S. Senator Otis F. Glenn represented him when he was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Edwin K. Walker.

The former immigrant boy, who supposedly had been sought by henchmen of Jack "Legs" Diamond, New York gangster, as well as by federal detectives and operatives of Scotland Yard, was glad to tell how he met the Prince of Wales.

"On August 18 last year," he said, "I won $650,000 playing chemin de fer in the Casino at Le Touquet, near Deauville. A few nights later the management of the Casino called me at my hotel. They said the Prince was going to play that night and asked if I would like to participate also.

DRANK WITH PRINCE.

"I sat at the table beside the Prince that evening, but didn't play with or against him. I didn't win or lose much that night. The Prince, it seemed to me, hasn't very good card sense. He doesn't read the cards quickly.

"I talked with him for some time. He asked me how I won the $650,000 and I told him in detail the plays I had made. When he got up from the table he took me out to the bar and bought me a drink."

Persons reports indicated that the prince had been "taken into camp" by Factor.

Of the charges against him Factor said:

"I have been operating in New York and Chicago brokerage offices for 20 years. I didn't have a brokerage concern in London, but I wasn't considering money just going in and operating. There are a lot of disgruntled brokers in that crowd who were caught short in the market, and I blame the charges on them.

"As for those reports that 'Legs' Diamond tried to have me killed, they're the bunk. I don't know Diamond and never met him or had any dealings with him."

KAUFMAN TO BE BURIED HERE

The body of Mitchell B. Kaufman, Malden rubber manufacturer who froze to death in the Maine woods, arrived at the undertaking rooms of J. Stanotsky & Sons, in the West End, this afternoon.

A motor hearse was speeding to Boston today from the Maine woods with the body of Mitchell B. Kaufman, long-missing rubber magnate, which will be laid in a grave in West Roxbury this evening.

The start for Boston was made following an official report by a Canadian coroner that Kaufman froze to death after collapsing from exhaustion.

Decision to have the burial in Boston, instead of at Lawrence, where Kaufman's father rests, was made by relatives while the body was on its way here today.

MOTHER SETS BURIAL

The remains will be taken to the home of Mrs. Ralph Susmsn, 50 Russell st., Brookline. There the relatives will gather and will then accompany the body to Pride of Jacob Cemetery, Grove street.

Brief Orthodox services will be conducted in the cemetery chapel by Jacob Stanetsky, undertaker, of 19 Eaton pl., West End, two of whose assistants are driving the hearse to Boston from Jackman, Me.

Kaufman will not be buried in Lawrence, relatives said, because his mother, sisters and most of his other kin now live in Boston and Brookline.

Waiting for the arrival of the body of her brother, Mrs. Albert H. Wechsler denied today that she and other relatives would "demand" the arrest of Neil Rannonet, forest guide, for gross negligence, but she said:

"The officials down there know what the facts are and their duty is plain. He was guiding my brother after having lost his license. I am sure the authorities will take action."

The official report of the coroner, Dr. A. P. Auger, of St. Joseph's, Beauce, Quebec, ended this long investigation which various officials had conducted on a theory that Kaufman was a victim of foul play.

DOCTORS FLAY VOLSTEAD ACT

Manchester, N. H., May 20 (AP)—Charges that the Federal Government, through certain sections of the Volstead Act, had taken over the functions of physicians, were contained in a resolution passed today by the State Medical Society, in convention here.

The resolution said:

"The Volstead Act compels physicians to betray confidences of patients by recording diseases and ailments for Federal inspectors, thus violating the traditions of the medical profession and medical ethics."

STATLER SAFE IS LOOTED

print on the safe and photographed it for comparison with the criminal records. The wire-cutters, a large, new pair, were found on the floor.

The only other clue was a piece of paper, with pictures of tools on it, apparently part of the wrapper in which the clippers came.

The hotel often has as much as $25,000 in bills of large and small denominations in thes afe, according to Manager Cushing, who was lunching in the main dining room at the time of the robbery and was one of the first to reach the scene.

The cashier's office is in a corridor off the mezzaine on the side opposite the elevators. John Lucy of Newton, a Statler veteran who has worked up from the auditing department to be general cashier, went to lunch downstairs at 1:10 and discovered the break half an hour later.

He had left the safe closed, but had not thrown the combination, believing the money safe with as many other employes in other offices in the same corridor.

$1100 IS SPILLED

Nobody heard the thieves, however, even when the $1100 in coins were spilled about the floor.

Miss Kathleen M. Buckley, 23, of 116 Warren st., Allston, secretary to the auditor, sits at a desk near the door of the accounting department in the room opposite the cashier's office.

She was questioned by Inspectors Crowley, Regan and Bonner of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation of police headquarters as to whether or not she had seen suspicious characters in the corridor either today or previously, but she had not. She was at lunch when the robbery occurred.

Police believe there were two robbers. They are believed to have entered the man lobby, mounted the steps to the mezzanine where guests were sitting around and entered the office corridor unnoticed.

WORK OF PROFESSIONALS

They then apparently slipped the latch on the corridor door, entered the cashier's office knowing he was at lunch, and spent ten minutes or more breaking into the cage. After cutting the wire on the grilled door they slipped the latch open.

Manager Cushing expressed the opinion that the man who used the wire-cutters avoided leaving fingerprints on this tool by wrapping it in the paper, a piece of which was found. This bit of paper was held for further examination.

Cushing also said the robbery appeared to be the work of professional thieves who had carefully studied the situation long in advance and made their plans perfectly.

WILBUR GIVES PLEDGE FOR HIGH WAGE

Secretary of the Interior Says Hoover Will Keep the Pay Up and Run in 1932

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Consuming power, he said, was the basis for prosperity.

"We could have prosperity tomorrow," he declared, "if the people would abandon this dead center in which they stand and begin to buy at once."

WAGES ONLY HOPE

Wilbur's positive declaration for the maintenance of high wages in this country was interpreted as containing particular significance, coming as it did on the heels of the statement by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor that the banks were engaged in a vicious campaign to compel industrialists to break wages to lower levels.

It was accepted with added significance because of the fact that Wilbur is recognized as Hoover's most intimate friend and counsellor.

Wilbur was asked by an industrialist and employer at the conference if it were not advisable and necessary now to hammer down the wage scale to meet the falling prices of commodities.

"By no means," he replied. "The national administration accepts the theory that high wages mean consuming power and that consuming power is necessary to maintain business and restore prosperity.

UPWARD TREND IN JUNE.

"Men without income can not buy! men of reduced income can buy less. The fullest buying power possible is necessary to sustain our own domestic market. Low wages can not provide a high domestic market.

"I have been through three economic depressions in my lifetime, and I have observed that when Summer comes, signs are in the ground give to us the psychology of confidence.

"I look for the upward trend to begin in June and to increase throughout July.

"We could have prosperity tomorrow if the people would begin to buy. We ought to get off this dead center upon which we have been halted."

Wilbur is here to address the convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs at Swampscott tonight. The breakfast was given in his honor by John Richardson, also an intimate friend of the President. Lieut.-Gov. Youngman, former Governor Allen, President Bacon of the Senate and Speaker Saltonstall of the House were among those present, who included political and business leaders of Massachusetts.

WIDOW AND TWO GIRLS SLAIN

Mattoon, Ill., May 20 (AP)—Mrs. Carrie Bowers was shot to death and her two daughters, aged two and five, were strangled and then beaten to death by a man who confessed to police and identified himself as J. M. Johnson, formerly of Arkansas.

Johnson told police he set fire to the house in which he lived with Mrs. Bowers intending to burn his three victims, but that when they escaped the flames he took them in his automobile five miles from town and there shot the woman to death, and killed the girls.

Police said he came here with the woman and children six months ago. Neighbors say he represented himself to them as a former employe of Mrs. Bowers' husband, who had died.

LODGE MEN ARE SUED FOR DUES

Things were fraternally dark for knights in Lynn court today when Sampson Lodge, Knights of Pythias, had 10 knights summoned into small claims session for alleged non-payment of dues.

Four were adjudged in arrears $24 each, although they protested they had resigned verbally some time ago. Four others defaulted, and the remaining two proved they had paid their dues in advance.

Judge Philip M. Kiley ruled that inasmuch as they had not submitted a formal resignation, they were still entitled to benefits and therefore were still members.

"Sentenced"

MEGAN GEORGE 'PUT ON TRIAL'

London, May 20 (AP)—Miss Megan Lloyd George, M. P., daughter of the former Prime Minister, was under sentence today to sit in the House of Lords for "following in her father's footsteps."

In a mock trial in the London School of Economics a jury found her guilty and decreed she should be transferred from the House of Commons so that she could not hear the speeches of her father, now leader of the Liberal party.

Philip Guedalla, historian and writer, prosecuted the charge, accusing her of speaking Welsh, to the danger of the public, and of frequenting a building used by Lady Astor, American-born member of the House.

Pleading not guilty—or of extenuating circumstances if guilty—Miss Lloyd George said she had been subjected to undue influence at an early age and that politics was a disease of the blood transmitted from generation to generation.

VATICAN HOLDS UP SPANISH RECOGNITION

Final Decision May Rest on Report Made by Cardinal Who Fled Republic

Vatican City, May 20 (AP)—To clarify what has been described as a confused situation a semi-official statement from the Vatican today said the Spanish Republic had not yet been recognized by the Holy See.

Immediately after its installation the provisional Spanish republican government was said to have addressed the usual diplomatic communication of its formation to the apostolic nuncio at Madrid, expressing the wish to continue friendly relations with the Holy See.

The nuncio, on instructions from the Vatican, acknowledged the communication and confirmed the Holy See's sentiments of particular goodwill toward the Spanish nation.

It was explained here, however, that real recognition of the Spanish republic has not been, nor could be, given for a double reason.

Because the King of Spain has not formally abdicated but merely retired from the country to await developments and because the present republican government is only as it itself declares a provisional government.

Meanwhile, it was said today, Cardinal Segura, primate of Spain, who fled to France, and two bishops expelled by the republican government of Spain, are coming to Vatican City to make a full report to the Pope on their own experiences and observations.

CLIFFORD LOSES FIGHT TO STAY

William J. Clifford of Arlington was ordered extradited to the Irish Free State by U. S. Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney today, to stand trial on a charge of embezzling $600 in tax receipts in 1929.

A fight to have the commissioner's decision overruled was immediately launched by Attorney George A. Douglass, counsel for Clifford.

Douglass claims that the United States has no extradition treaty with the Irish Free State, and that the existing British treaty is not binding now as regards Ireland.

A hearing will be held late this afternoon on the attorney's application for a habeas corpus writ to free Clifford pending a hearing before a federal judge on the appeal.

Ralph Barton, Famed Artist, Fearing Insanity, Ends Life

SHOOTS SELF IN NEW YORK APARTMENT

Melancholy for Years, Artist Feared Insanity; Divorced by 4th Wife Month Ago

New York, May 20—Ralph Barton, widely-known caricaturist, who once called New York a "crazy city" and America "a madhouse," killed himself in his apartment today, driven to the act, he explained in a note, by fear of insanity.

A month ago in Paris he was divorced by his fourth wife, the former Germaine Marie Vallentine. Last night Miss Ruth Kreage, daughter of S. S. Kreage, sailed for Europe on the same liner as Rufus Users Cushing, described as her fiance. A year ago it was rumored Miss Kreage and Barton were to be married after his divorce.

BODY FOUND BY MAID

A maid who went to the Barton apartment early today discovered the artist's body, stretched upon the bed, a pistol beside it.

Barton's fear of insanity was revealed in his own obituary typed before he killed himself.

The document, headed by one word "obit" written in red ink was unusual and fascinating. It read:

"Everyone who has known me and who hears of this will have a different hypothesis to offer, to explai nwhy I did it.

HAD GLAMOROUS LIFE

"Practically all of these hypotheses will be dramatic and completely wrong.

"Any sane doctor knuows that the reasons for suicide are invariably psycho-pathological, and the true suicide-type manifactures his own difficulties.

"I have had few real difficulties—I have had on the contrary an exceptionally glamorous life —as life goes—and I have had more than my share of affection and appreciation.

"The most charming, intelligent and important people I have known have liked me and the list of my enemies is very flattering to me. I have always had excellent health, but since my early childhood I have suffered exceedingly from a melancholia which, since the past five years, has begun to show definite signs of manic depressive insanity.

WORK BECAME TORTURE

"It has prevented my getting like the full value out of my work, and for the past three years made work a torteru to do at all."

Even as a boy, he wrote, he had suffered from melancholia. Recently he had grown more and more nervous and found it more difficult to keep up with his work.

Barton was 39 years old and a native of Kansas City, Mo. He spent many years in France and "covered" the world war in illustrations which appeared in the English publication "Puck." He was best known in America for his caricatures, in Life and the New Yorker and other magazines.

NEW YORK CRAZY CITY

Neysa McMein, the artist, was among those called to the apartment today after Barton's body was found. She told reporters there was no truth in reports that Barton was in financial difficulties.

Two years ago when Barton returned from Paris to make his home here, he was quoted as saying:

"New York is a crazy city and America is a madhouse. That is why I came back. I feel I belong here. Americans are crazy, and I find I am crazy, too. We're all crazy. We're all too rich. I have too much money. That's why I'm crazy. The French aren't crazy, for they haven't so much money."

NEWFOUNDLAND BLAZE HALTED

An amendment to the taxicab law, requiring all drivers to be citizens, was adopted in the House today. The law applies to Boston.

MISSING GIRLS 'JUST ON LARK'

Brewster, May 20—Two little girls from school kept three police outfits throughout the state on their toes all night in a hunt for the missing misses—and then the girls turned up safely at breakfast.

They had been playing grown-up and had had a wonderful time making believe they were ladies and sitting up late and chatting in a room they hired at Duncroft Inn here, where their parents stop when visiting the girls.

The girls, sought throughout the night, while their families and officials of exclusive Sea Pine school here passed many anxious hours, were Anna Williams, 15, of Jamaica Plain, and Marie Anne Morrill, 13, of Gloucester.

School authorities notified Anna's father, the Rev. Charles H. Williams of Alveston rd., Jamaica Plain, retired rector of Central Congregational Church, Jamaica Plain, and Marie Anne's mother, Mrs. Florence Morrill of "Houndsmoor Lodge," Harriet rd., Bass Rocks, Gloucester, a leader in North Shore society.

WOMAN JUDGE MAY BE OUSTED

New York, May 20—Newspapers today said Referee Samuel Seabury, investigating the magistrates court, would recomend to the appellate division the removal of two magistrates—one the city's only woman judge—the censuring of another and disbarment of 13 lawyers.

Printed reports, awaiting Mr. Seabury's finsal approvat, newspapers said, would ask the removal of Magistrate Jean H. Norris and Jesse Silbermann and the court's rebuke of Magistrate H. Stanley Renaud.

At the court's discretion the accused magistrates may be given open trials before the full bench of the appellate division, which must pass on their removal. Magistrate Norris is to be charged with altering court records, newspapers said, while Magistrate Silbermann is blamed for being biased in certain cases.

The 15 lawyers are thought to be the ones who occupied "Lawyers' Row" on 10th st., across the street from the women's court.

Immediately upon their arrival at the Essex County Jail the alienists took young Noble to the hospital room on the top floor, where they remained more than two hours.

Bee Causes Auto Crash; 2 Women, Girl Are Hurt

Moving day and a bee proved disastrous for two women and a girl soon after they started a trip from Easthampton to East Weymouth today.

On the Boston Post rd. at Spencer, Mrs. Mary Mongeau, 64, Mrs. Theresa Orme, 41, and Julia Hebert, 18, suffered serious injuries when the roadster of Mrs. Orme's hit a telephone pole. The three were taken to Worcester City Hospital, where doctors said the condition of all three was critical.

Mrs. Orme, according to police, was frightened by a bee as she drove the roadster through Spencer. She lost control of the car and crashed into the pole.

Miss Hebert was riding in the rumble seat and was thrown clear of the car. They told police they were moving from Easthampton to East Weymouth.

ARREST THREAT ON HOOVER BOOK

Police threatened arrests today in connection with the selling in a Federal st. store of a book attacking President Hoover. Hundreds gathered, obstructing the sidewalk and street.

Protests by neighboring businessmen caused removal to the inside of the shop of a large amplifier, which was blaring out music and announcements about the book.

Crowds continued to gather, however, and a policeman was sent to the scene to keep the street open.

Atty. Conrad Crooker, general counsel for the Liberal Civic League, conferred with Capt. Martin King of Milk st. police station, who threatened arrests for obstructing traffic and disturbing the peace, the latter referring to the amplifier.

ABUSE DROVE HER TO GRIEF, SHE SAYS

Contradictory Statements of Estranged Pair Mark Lowell Woman's Suit for Divorce

"My husband's constant abuse drove me frantic with grief and despair—to the point of seeking help from his superiors," said Mrs. Ruth Halpin Dunstan of Lowell on the stand in Middlesex Probate court today.

"I never struck or threaten abused my wife in the years of our life together, although she struck and kicked me on numerous occasions and once started the fires on my car. She referred to my mother as an 'old hell-hag,'" said her husband, Capt. Edwin V. Dunstan, U. S. A.

WROTE TO WASHINGTON

"In 1930 I went to the inspector at the South Boston base and told my story. I got no help, so I wrote a 17-page letter, describing his inhuman treatment, and addressed it to the Secretary of War, the Department of Justice, the Adjutant-General, the commanding officer at West Point and to other officials I thought might intervene."

"Did you do this with the idea of having your husband deprived of his rank and discharged from the army?" asked Attorney James E. Markham, counsel for Capt. Dunstan.

AS LAST RESORT

"I did not. I did it because I was driven almost insane by his abuse, and as a last resort," Mrs. Dunstan replied.

Mrs. Dunstan described a motor trip with her husband and their sick child through Canada in 1926, during which, she said, she was "constantly in terror because he had a gun."

"Did he ever threaten you with it?" she was asked by Attorney Markham.

"No," she replied, "but I was always afraid. He made the entire trip miserable by keeping us constantly on the move, no matter how ill I or the baby was."

"I have heard, since I left my husband, that his treatment of our children has been good. Captain at West Point keeps me informed of the children's health and of how Capt. Dunstan treats them, but, of course, the eyes of everyone at the post are upon him since they learned how he had treated me. He wouldn't dare treat the children other than kindly."

At the conclusion of Mrs. Dunstan's cross-examination, Judge Colin C. Campbell, attorneys for both sides and a court clerk retired to the lobby of the court to read the lengthy exhibits in military matters into the court record. The details of the missive were not divulged.

DOLLAR WORTH 36 CENTS MORE

Washington, May 20 (AP)—The 1926 wholesale dollar was worth $1.364 last month.

The Labor Department found today that the dollar's value during the year increased more in rubber purchasing power than in any of the other 350 commodities covered by the calculations. The April, 1931, dollar could have bought rubber that would have cost $7.519 in April, 1926.

Last month's dollar also was worth $2.264 in petroleum products, $2.212 in silk and rayon and $2.188 in automobile tires.

The department said the index number of the April, 1931, dollar, based on 1926 as 100, was 73.5, or 1.2 less than March of this year.

BEAUTY FREED IN NIRDLINGER DEATH CASE

The acquitted widow was given her liberty tonight after spending 42 days in jail.

Mrs. Nirdlinger, sobbing out her story in halting French, told of bitter quarrels in which her jealous husband accused her of having love affairs with other men.

On the night of March 11, she said, he strode into her bedroom and resumed a quarrel which had begun that morning. She said he seized her by the throat and she reached under her pillow for a revolver she kept there, because she "feared her husband".

She burst into tears as she then told of the actual killing.

"I can't remember what did happen when my husband grasped my throat," she cried.

"He came into the bedroom and said such disgusting things to me that I cannot repeat them. I fired—I did not mean to kill him."

NURSE DEFENDS HER

Her voice failed and, unable to proceed, she sank back into her chair. Many other women who were in the courtroom wept with her.

The examining magistrate subjected the defendant to a barrage of questions concerning her married life when the defendant was first called to the bar.

"Did you and your husband lead separate lives?" he asked.

"If not, why did you always go dancing and neglect your home and your children."

Stifling her emotion for a moment, Mrs. Nirdlinger denied the inference that she had a recent sweetheart.

"Then why," asked the judge, "did your husband accuse you? Why was he so jealous?"

To these questions Mrs. Nirdlinger only shook her head.

The defendant, still sobbing, described how, struggling with her husband, she reached under her pillow for the revolver with which she shot him.

"Why did you have a revolver under your pillow?" the judge asked.

"It was a bad habit, I admit, but I was afraid of my husband who was jealous and violent," the defendant declared, "He also had a revolver."

"Yes," interjected the judge, "but he kept it locked in a trunk."

TELLS OF MANY ROWS

Accusing the defendant of being flighty in thoughts, too much occupied with pretty dresses and dancing," the magistrate introduced two pieces of evidence designed to show her interests were not confined to her husband and her home.

One was a photograph of the defendant in a bathing suit and the other a letter alleged to have been written by her to a friend. This the judge read aloud.

"There are nothing but constant rows," Mrs. Nirdlinger was quoted as writing; "but I'll be damned if I'll stay home and sit in a corner reading. I am still young. Maybe when I'm his age I'll do that."

The defendant was followed on the stand by her nurse, Irma Stoll, who denied the charges that Mrs. Nirdlinger had been guilty of affairs.

"Mrs. Nirdlinger never flirted and never had any love affairs," she said. "I would have known it if she had."

Mrs. Copley May, a friend of Mrs. Nirdlinger, testified that the theatrical magnate had led his wife "a dog's life."

HUSBAND JEALOUS

Charles Loeb, Paris lawyer, testified the Nirdlingers had appeared to be happy and that the theater man had never shown signs of violence.

An effort to prove Nirdlinger's reported jealousy of his wife was made by introduction of letters which the theater man wrote to a friend in England and another to his lawyer.

"Charlotte wants a divorce, $65 a week and $10,000 in cash," Nirdlinger wrote to the friend in England. "She wants to give me custody of the children.

"Since her affair with that Italian at St. Moritz things have gone from bad to worse, and since the Italian has followed her here it has become intolerable. She goes to the postoffice twice a week for secret correspondence."

In a letter to his lawyer, also introduced into evidence, the theater magnate said:

"I want to change my will. I will cut off this wife who is a faithless coquette."

Just prior to the introduction of the letters, Graham Scully, secretary to Nirdlinger, testified that Charlotte had an affair with an Egyptian two years ago, but asserted "Nirdlinger was not jealous."

Mrs. Nirdlinger was sobbing when she was led into court by two gendarmes.

MOTHER IS OVERCOME.

Dressed entirely in black, including a black mantle, which a gendarme removed as she entered the prisoner's box, she was too overcome to give her name and could only nod to the opening question.

When Magistrate Vauchier stilled to call the jury she presented a pitiful appearance as she tearfully eyed the men who are to decide her fate. She plainly showed the strain of her long stay in prison since the night of the shooting.

When the name of Mrs. James I. Nash, her mother, was called as a witness she almost swooned. The mother, more overcome than her daughter, had to be helped from the courtroom.

U.S. INDUSTRIES READY FOR WAR

New York, May 20 (AP)—From an industrial viewpoint, the United States is better prepared for war than at any time in its history, Frederick H. Payne, assistant secretary of war, declared today.

Largely by applying the lessons it learned in the World War, Mr. Payne told members of the Manhattan Reserve Officers Association at luncheon today, the federal government has been able to establish closer relations with industries which supply the materials of war.

"To help solve the problems of manufacturers in beginning war production of very special items," he said, "Orders have been placed affording opportunity to determine all the alterations that would be necessary if quantity production should become necessary."

Searchers Get Body of Missing Explorer

Berlin, May 20 (AP)—Reports to the Wolff Bureau today said a relief expedition in Greenland had found the body of Prof. Alfred Wegener, German explorer, 83 miles from his camp at Eismitte.

ROGERS SCORES OLD MASTERS

It's time to scrap the old masters of literature.

Unreasonable stubbornness in worshipping the "genteel literature" of the 19th century is driving high school boys and girls to the "two cent drug store books."

These were among the views with which Prof. Robert E. Rogers of Technology, famous author of the "Be a Snob" advice to college boys, startled members of the Manuscript Club at the Hotel Westminster.

And in the course of his remarks he interpolated the criticism that under President Lowell Harvard has lost interest in literature, teaching "everything else but."

"Imagine what the average high school girl thinks when she reads Tennyson's 'Idylls of the King,'" he said.

"Imagine what is her reaction when she reads of the beautiful Guinevere groveling at the feet of King Arthur. And what is her reaction when King Arthur tells her that he and God forgive her?"

"King Lear," "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice" and other plays of Shakespeare he would supplant in high school with the works of Eugene O'Neill and Galsworthy, and the essays of Montaigne he would replace with those of Elmer Davis.

He said it was unfortunate that America, slowly developing a language of its own, should still give 19th century literature a major place in our educational system.

In Foolproof Plane Couple Will Fly Around Globe

London, May 20 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Healty Day of Ridgewood, N. J., announced today they would start their projected world flight from Heston next week in "a foolproof plane."

"At dinner one day my wife said, 'We've nobody dependent on us, why don't we do something?' I suggested flying around the United States." Day said, "but my wife replied why not around the world? The next day I started designing our plane."

The Days crossed the Atlantic by steamer, as they will the Pacific, but they plan to fly the rest of the way, expecting to reach New York in about four months.

PONTOONS PUT ON LINDY PLANE

Los Angeles, May 20 (AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh is toying with another idea for his fast monoplane.

An order has been received by the builders of his Lockheed-Sirius plane for a set of pontoons to be interchangeable with the present landing gear.

What use the flier is to make of this new equipment was not revealed. Gasoline tanks will be fitted in the pontoons, enabling Lindbergh to carry a larger load of fuel. The present gasoline capacity of the ship is about 450 gallons.

Some time ago he instructed engineers to build a retractable landing gear folding into a wing. The idea was his own and since he suggested it to the Lockheed engineers a year ago they have used it successfully in a number of other fast monoplanes.

With the retractable gear Lindbergh's ship, which was a 600-horsepower motor, probably could attain a speed of about 250 miles an hour. Engineers estimated it should attain a speed of about 180 miles an hour with pontoons.

Chiropractic Bill Dies

The House today, without debate, rejected the bill under which the practice of chiropractic would be regulated in this state. Rejection was recommended by the committee on ways and means.

LEWIS IN YALE MEDAL ROW

New York, May 20 (AP)—There seemed to be a wide divergence today between Sinclair Lewis and officials of Sterling Memorial Library at Yale University over whether the author had offered his Nobel prize medal to the library.

Lewis said he offered the medal, which he was awarded with the $46,350 prize, to the library. Charles E. Rush, associate librarian, said no offer was made.

"I thought the Yale library was the natural place for the medal, Lewis said. "I learned better, however, than to try to make any presents to the Yale library. They just didn't seem interested, and said there wasn't any place in their collection for such an item."

Rush said:

"He asked if we had any exhibit of coins or medals, a permanent exhibit. I told him we had a numismatic collection and would be glad to show it to him.

"He said no, he didn't want to see it, but did we have a permanent loan of coins? I didn't know what he meant by a permanent loan, and asked him to explain. Then he said, 'No, I won't do it,' and turned on his heel and walked out of the building. He hadn't made the slightest mention of any gift to the library or of the Nobel medal."

BOSTON IN GRIP OF VIOLENT GANG WAR

though trained to surprising discoveries, I have been shocked to learn the identity of the men, prominent in public circles, who have protected the racketeers.

During my citizenship in the underworld I learned that:

A $500,000 War Chest was recently borrowed in Boston, some of it from reputable financiers, by the high chief of the invading gang, an erstwhile Bostonian—on his unsecured notes.

The present gang war marks the entrance into New England of "Owney" Madden, notorious New York racket king.

Notice has been served on a powerful Bay State politician, whose influence is felt in both the Democratic and Republican parties and has been known to reach into Washington, that he must "play ball" with the new gang—or else—

$2,000,000 GEM RACKET

Boston has the reputation throughout the country's underworld of being the best market for stolen jewels, and the annual turnover from this traffic is $2,000,000 a year. The prize also goes to the victor in the present war.

An inestimable amount of narcotics is run into Boston from the Canadian border and shipped to Lawrence, which serves as the New England distributing point.

I have learned of many other things which I propose to reveal. There is, for instance, the real story of the visit of the agents of the notorious "Scarface Al" Capone to Boston a few months back.

There is also the interesting details of the attempt of a Boston-New York rum running gang to convert sacred Plymouth Rock into a landing base for booze.

There is also the true story of the attempt of righteous federal agents to indict a few prominent Boston men as members of a powerful liquor ring, an attempt that was stopped cold in Washington.

I also learned that Boston gangsters are reluctant to take up the Chicago machine gun method of eliminating rivals. They are too fearful of Massachusetts justice.

But they have their own method of "putting a man on the spot."

Instead of the death ride for a victim, his unloadings are tipped to federal officials by men planted in his "mob."

His financial ruin and subsequent imprisonment are thereby assured.

MAGNUS "IN MIDDLE"

And this brings us to the inside story of the seizure of "Big John" Magnus and his liquor at Dorchester last Wednesday night.

"Big John," one of the most colorful of all the eastern seaboard rumrunners, is a field captain of the monopolistic liquor organization that has functioned continuously for 10 years under the protecting wing of the above named bipartisan politician.

"Big John" former Back Bay gagraceman and confessed rum-ring leader was once owner of the notorious I'm Alone and the Peg, fast boats.

He boasted he would never "take a rap" but made a mistake and served 18 months at Plymouth on a Federal sentence.

He was again "hagged" Wednesday in the $85,000 Federal liquor raid on the Dorchester waterfront with 22 of his men.

And he is the man "in the middle," in the present struggle, with the possibility that he has been tossed overboard by "The Big Boy."

MODERN EQUIPMENT

On the other side is the new outfit, also headed by a Boston man, backed by "Owney" Madden and equipped with the most modern impediments for successful rum-running.

First and foremost it possesses a brimming war chest, started with the $500,000 loan illegally negotiated on notes without the slightest security.

It has alliances with rum rings in Atlantic City, Jersey City, New York, Philadelphia and the Middle West.

At its disposal are ships, fast boats, airplanes, radio and many ruthless men.

Its leader is high-powered, progressive, mentally alert and in step with the times.

He served notice that old-fashioned methods in the liquor racket here as in other things, must go.

Displaying marked executive ability, he built up an organization with which to enforce his demands.

He got an "in" at Atlantic City, Jersey City and Philadelphia, notoriously "tough spots" for liquor racketeers to "muscle in."

He acquired the friendship of Owney Madden, and some of the rum fleet of Bill Dwyer, two of New York's "liquor shots."

AIRPLANE SPOTTERS

This information was supplemented by the spotting of Coast Guard boats by airplane observers.

Short wave radio stations were established by him at strategic points along the coast.

Then he was ready to invade his home town and battle for supremacy.

The mistake made by "Big John" Magnus, previously referred to, gave him an opportunity which he was quick to seize.

NAMED AS "STOOL"

Liquor racketeers, like all others outside the law, hate and fear a "stool."

The hazards of their racket are offset to a considerable extent by judicious expenditure of "grease" or protection money.

But there are some law enforcement officials who cannot be fixed, and a "stool" can upset any plan.

They require large expenditures of money.

Also they attract unfavorable publicity antithetical to the rackets.

The "Big Boys" were appealed to and it was decreed that Magnus must "take a rap."

In 1923 in federal court here he was sentenced to two years in Plymouth house of correction.

SERVED 18 MONTHS

He had pleaded guilty to conspiracy and perjury after one trial which ended in a disagreement.

Coast guardsmen testified he had bribed them to let him get alongside the I'm Alone in his fast boat Peg II.

Also that an intricate code was used, with certain coast guard craft picketing rival rum ships.

"Big John" did 18 months, during which period his racket was carried along just the same.

When he emerged once more, Magnus attempted to resume his activities where he had laid them down.

NEW GANG SHOWS

At first things went along as usual, with liquor coming down regularly from St. Pierre, Miquelon, and being unloaded.

Then, suddenly the new organization made its appearance.

Gaining confidence, the new organization began to take the initiative.

A short time ago Magnus began to lose loads of liquor through the unexpected and inopportune appearance of federal men at unloadings.

THEN THE CRASH

The work of putting him "in the middle" had begun.

The federal agents also seized 200 cases of choice liquors, two speedboats, nine autos and a small arsenal.

The government men used Magnus' former pet fast boat, Peg II, in the roundup. They also used information in making the raid supplied by two members of the gang planted in Magnus' mob. These two were also arrested and released on bail provided by Magnus' protector.

As the raiders descended on the wharf they made a significant discovery.

Drawn up and waiting were 14 hackers.

Waiting to make sure of Magnus' capture the "Feds" failed to get him. They were in the pay of the rum organization.

The latest blow was delivered Sunday at Sandwich when a load owned by a former partner of "Big John's," was seized, also on a tip.

Further revelations will be made by the Masked Reporter tomorrow.

'LITTLE DEVILS' CAUSED BOY TO KILL MOTHER

New York, May 20 (INS)—Another tragedy caused by drug addiction was listed in the police records today.

Vincent Russell, 20 years old, was under arrest charged with choking and beating his mother, Mrs. Tessie Russell, a frail little woman of 53. He clubbed her over the head with a lead pipe and her condition was reported to be grave.

He wanted money for "dope," according to his explanation to the police. He had been a confirmed user of drugs for two two years.

Young Vincent was contrite today. He said:

"The little devils kept sticking pitchforks into my brain. I was crazy and didn't know what I was doing to poor Ma."

His mother had a little money, earned by hard work, which she had tediously saved. He had been idle. He wanted the money—$275—which she had hidden beneath a mattress in their home in Brooklyn.

"Please don't take any more of that stuff—see what it's done to you."

WILKINS' PLAN PRAISED BY STEFANSSON

New York, May 20 (US)—Capt. Sir George Hubert Wilkins' proposed Arctic submarine expedition was praised at a farewell luncheon given in his honor by the City Club yesterday.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, famous Arctic explorer, replied to the recent criticism of retired Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman. He quoted Admiral Rodman as saying that the expedition was foolhardy and hazardous and, if it does succeed, it will be of no value to mankind.

HITS ARGUMENT

Stefansson said:

"He mentions the hazard from the 'polar ice-cap.' There is no polar ice-cap. There is one in Greenland, but not at the pole."

In concluding, he said:

Capt. Wilkins said that if he and his aides do 50 per cent of what they plan, he will consider the expedition a success.

READY FOR HAZARDS

They have estimated the dangers and have made every preparation for them, he said. He revealed that ever since he was a child he has wanted to forecast weather far in advance, and because of unknown territory, he has had to become an explorer to become a meteorologist.

Capt. Wilkins said that he will go to the Nautilus at New London, Conn., today. He plans to sail for Europe within two weeks and the submarine is scheduled to leave next week.

Autoist Gets Jail Term and $25 Fine

Guy Constantino, 18, of Wayne ave., Braintree, decided to take a month in jail and a $25 fine today in Quincy court when he was arraigned on five automobile charges following a chase in Holbrook last night. He pleaded nolo to driving so as to endanger, driving without a license, refusing to stop at a signal and driving a car not registered.

He was sentenced to a month on the former and fined for driving without a license. The others were filed. On a charge of driving a car not properly insured he was found not guilty.

LABOR TO FIGHT WAGE-CUTTING

Washington, May 20 (AP)—Better organization to keep "any unjustified, unsound, uneconomic burden from being forced upon labor's back" was suggested today to metal trades councils by the American Federation of Labor.

The Federation's metal trades department held that since "short-sighted and selfish employers, encouraged by the advice of some of the nation's leading bankers, are reducing or attempting to reduce wages," active efforts should be made to organize the unorganized.

Such a step, it is said, would enable more wage-earners to "make use of collective action" against lower pay proposals.

Asserting the American wage-earners and their dependents constitute 85 per cent of the population and it is the goods they purchase which maintain American industries, the department said, "The present depression was caused principally by the failure of industry to pay wages in proportion to the wealth being created."

Drunk Faces Sanity Test on 69th Arrest

For the 69th time, John Mannion of Walnut st., Newton, appeared in Dedham District Court today charged with drunkenness, assault and battery, destruction of property and disturbing the peace. He was sent to Medfield State Hospital for ten days' observation, and the case was continued to May 29.

Pummeled three policemen, smashed window in the police car, wrecked the plumbing in his cell at the Wellesley police station—that was what Mannion did, according to the police.

It was reported that his arraignment would be his 85th, but a careful survey of the court records showed he was just one time shy of three score and ten.

Found Dead in Bed

Walter J. Haywood, 48, who had charge of the billiards and cardroom at the University Club, was found dead in bed from acute indigestion today at his lodging house, 282 Columbus ave., South End. He had complained of illness last night before leaving the club.

STUDENTS HELP FIGHT BLAZE

Waterville, Me., May 20 (AP)—Fire today destroyed a storehouse of the Kennebec Canoe Company and two residences with a loss estimated at $200,000.

The fire threatened the High st. section of the city and Colby College students joined firemen in their efforts to bring it under control.

At 2 o'clock the blaze was still burning but officials said they expected to keep it in check and confine the damage to the three structures.

The Boston & Maine Railroad was formally recognized as one of the outstanding railroads in the country in passenger safety at a dinner of the National Safety Council in Chicago last night for having operated its passenger trains 9,408,001,000 passenger miles in 12 years without a fatality to a passenger in a passenger train accident.

The record of the Boston & Maine was surpassed by only three of the seven railroads so recognized, and the local railroad led all New England railroads from Jan. 1, 1917, to Jan. 1 of this year.

Admiral Sims to Be Lantern Club Guest

The Lantern Club, composed of New England advertising representatives of national publications, will have Rear-Admiral William S. Sims, retired, as its speaker at a dinner for members and guests at the Hotel Bradford tomorrow at 6 o'clock.

He will speak on "Public Opinion and the Navy," and will touch on propaganda in war time, limitation of armaments and maintenance cost of navy yards.

DROWNING MAN IS RESCUED

A dramatic rescue from drowning was brought to a close the attempt of a Hyde Park man today to escape the heat by being one of the season's first swimmers.

Francis J. Allen, 29, of 14 Factory st., was swimming in the Neponset river when seized with cramps about 50 feet offshore.

After shouting for help he sank twice, but Leonard Hennet, of 1344 Hyde Park ave., who heard his cries, reached him before he went down the third time.

Hennet rushed out of the house and plunged into the water fully clad. Allen was taken to the City Hospital by police of station 18 and treated for immersion.

Ely's Salary Bill Veto Is Upheld

Governor Ely's veto of the bill raising the salary of the governor from $10,000 to $20,000, that of the lieutenant-governor from $4000 to $6000 and the members of the council from $1000 to $1500, was today sustained by the House on a rollcall vote, 45 to 148. The salary increases were to take effect in 1933.

A motion to postpone the veto by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston was outvoted.

Washington, May 20 (AP)—The army has begun tests on a combination 8-inch coast defense gun and 12-inch howitzer gun carriage which may be adopted for coast defense.

Experiments are being made to determine if a combination carriage could be employed for both types. Army officials said the other type of coast defense gun was of 14 inches. The army has 28 of the guns and four carriages. Officials said carriages had not been built for the remaining 24 guns because of economy measures.

U. S. FAR BEHIND EUROPE IN AIR FORCE

Gen. Mitchell Analyzes Present Equipment and Finds Most of It Obsolete

By GEN. WILLIAM MITCHELL
Former commander air forces A. E. F. and director aeronautics, U. S. Army.
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Dayton, O., May 20—A modern air force is composed of different branches, just as an army is made up of infantry, cavalry and artillery, and a navy of battleships, cruisers, detroyers and submarines. An air force has two principal arms, bombardment and pursuit.

Bombardment aviation is designed to carry the heaviest missiles to the targets they are intended to destroy. The larger bombardment airplanes can carry up to 6000 pounds of bombs.

They are equipped with supercharged engines which will take them up to 20,000 feet altitude, at speeds around 180 miles per hour.

ALTITUDE IMPORTANT

Altitude is the great means of concealment and when airplanes are assigned to attack a city on widely separated lines of advance, it is practically impossible to find or stop them.

Bombs may be dropped from the bombardment airplanes, or they may be projected from the air torpedo, which is really a small airplane guided by gyroscopic control and maneuvered by radio. One of these air torpedoes could be sent across the Atlantic Ocean.

There is also a gliding bomb which has wings and is dropped from the airplane. When sufficient speed is obtained, it glides toward its target. It has a gyroscope to guide its rudder. The ordinary water torpedo also can be used from an airplane against shipping.

U. S. WOEFULLY WEAK

There are only 36 bombardment planes for duty with the air division. These have a maximum speed of about 120 miles per hour, a ceiling of about 16,000 feet, a carrying capacity of 4000 pounds and a cruising range of only 700 or 800 miles.

Pursuit aviation is designed to pursue enemy airplanes, bring them to battle and destroy them. The best of our American pursuit airplanes have about 180 miles speed, a ceiling of about 20,000 feet and two guns, one of 30 calibre and one of 30 calibre.

EUROPE FAR AHEAD

Foreign service planes have speeds of 200 miles or more, ceilings of 30,000 to 35,000 feet and carry from four to six guns. Of the best class of pursuit planes actually in the hands of our troops, we have only about 116 ships.

The other branches of aviation are auxiliaries. We created attack aviation during the latter part of the European war for the purpose of attacking troops, trains, airdromes or other objects on the ground.

Notes and Gossip About People You Know

CITY HALL ON AIR

Two City Hall young men will be heard over the radio from Station WBSO, Needham, at 4:30 o'clock next Wednesday. They are Edmund M. Hart and "Billy" Lynch of the permit office of the street-laying-out department. "Ed" is leader of the orchestra which bears his name and "Billy" has acquired fame as a singer and entertainer.

THEY SING IT NOW

The season of campaign songs has opened. This little ditty is being sung in East Boston by supporters of Capt. "Bill" Coughlin, candidate for City Council. The nautical air of the composition is explained by the fact that for many years "Bill" was in the naval service.

"Yes, ho, my lads!
They say they never heard of me.
Just stow your guid,
Stand by the gate,
And watch your uncle navigate.
I'm on my way to dear old City Hall,
Election Day I'm bound to sink 'em all."

SULLIVAN FOR CONGRESS

It is rumored about City Hall that "Eddie" Sullivan, who gained fame while a member of the Boston school committee, and who later was defeated by a narrow margin by Congressman John W. McCormack of Dorchester, plans to stage a political comeback. Just what his plans are is not known, but it is presumed he will again seek a seat in Congress.

SASSERNO MAY RUN

Many are of the opinion that Henry A. Sasserno of West Roxbury, who was defeated for school committee in 1929, will be a candidate for the office again this year. At that time he received 28,673 votes, and in view of this showing, friends feel he is justified in running again.

CHECKER BATTLE LOOMS

"Tom" O'Leary of the central office, public works department, who claims to be the checker champion of City Hall, has accepted the challenge issued by "Eddie" Roache of the elevator service. "Tom" says that "Eddie" is having his ups and downs now but that when he gets through teaching him how to play checkers the smiling elevator man will be tagged for a permanent down. The match will take place next week in the checker rooms of the Wells Memorial, Washington st., South End.

BULLOCK MISSED DEBATE

The absence of Rep. Albert W. Bullock of Waltham during the debate in the House on old age assistance revenue on Tuesday occasioned a great deal of comment in the corridors. Bullock was one of the Republicans credited with putting the law upon the statute books.

HE IS BEING GROOMED

Rep. George P. Anderson of the Back Bay is one of the most active of the House members, both around the office of the Speaker and on the floor. It is said that he is being groomed for chairman of the judiciary, a position that carries with it the name of "titular leader" in the House.

DURHAM WAS GOOD

Rep. John S. Durham of Uxbridge, Democrat, is credited with delivering the best speech during the old age assistance debate. Durham contended that the needy aged will get no more under the act than they are now getting. He favors a straight old age pension system.

THE COUNTRY, THESE DAYS, IS THE SEVENTH heaven of delight and relaxation. Out at the Dedham Polo and Country Club yesterday, the Vincent Club held its annual meeting and election of officers, after which a gay luncheon was served.

* * *

This is always the occasion for the members, who have been abroad or South, from the four corners of the earth, literally, to meet and parade their new spring costumes. And this year they were especially smart, tweed-knitted in contrasting shades of brown vying with the ever chic black and white.

* * *

Mrs. William C. Cox (Jessie Bancroft) received congratulations on her ascendency to the office of president in a sleek black ensemble, a color of which she seems very fond. She will make a very efficient leader, although there were murmurs from the "old guard," who are always murmuring, by the way, that Jessie won her laurels too quickly.

Hartsook photo

MRS. WILLIAM COX

* * *

Elizabeth (Skipper) Hovey was elected second vice-president among several nominees. A newcomer to the office is Miss Grace Cushing, who will take up her duties as secretary, and popular Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr., will no doubt bank the treasury funds with a well-known bank of which her Gordon is an officer.

* * *

Ex-Presidents on Board

MISS HARRIET MORSE, THE RETIRING PRESIDENT, goes on the executive committee with Mrs. LeBaron Colt, who is one of the outstanding smartly gowned young matrons in this city of beehive hats and pompadours. Also Mrs. Henry M. Bohlen, Mrs. Henry Parsons King, Jr., a past president, and Miss Dorothy Lawrence and Miss Elizabeth Scaife.

* * *

It was a small meeting, but several interesting amendments to the constitution were considered.

* * *

EVELYN ROYCE ATTENDED the snappiest sport rig by Chanel in dark and light brown tweedy effect, short sleeves and cape, with shiny leather belt, topped by a little "bun" of a beret. Evelyn seems to accumulate more personality each time we see her. She was at the theater the other evening in a dream of a white and gold slinky brocade and the figure to wear it. She is just the type to adore yachting clothes, which she will do when she joins the Charles Stones next month for a cruise on their beautiful new yacht.

Miss Royce

* * *

AND NOW THAT WE HAVE received Peggy Creighton's wedding invitation we can definitely say that in spite of rumors of a postponement of her wedding to Ralph Williams, the ceremony will take place on Tuesday, June 9, at four o'clock at Trinity Church.

* * *

June Wedding

AN ENGAGEMENT OF interest to mid-victorians is that of Ralph Miller Johnson, railroad magnate of New York, Harvard '00, to Miss Anne Crosby of Belfast, Me. Mr. Johnson's first wife was a Miss Hastings of Boston, whose two sisters, Mrs. Emerson Bowen and Miss Maria Hastings, still reside here. The wedding will take place on Tuesday, June 2 at the home of the bride-to-be's sister, either in Stockbridge or Philadelphia.

* * *

To Study Music

AND STILL ANOTHER Junior Leaguer, Miss Dorothy Cornish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Jervis Cornish of Four Winds, Centerville, Cape Cod, is to sail June 20 to study music with Mme. Pierotto Bianco. They will travel to Paris, where they will be joined by Mme. Bianco's husband, a Venetian painter. Miss Cornish has already been granted an audition at the Royal Opera in Rome.

BOSTON GIRLS WIN PRIZES AT JUNIOR LEAGUE ART EXHIBIT

Katherine Lane Given Award in Sculpture

MISS KATHERINE LANE, Miss Susan Willard Flint, Miss Katherine H. Sturgis and Miss Aimee Lamb, Boston Junior League members, were awarded prizes at the exhibit in Cincinnati, held in connection with the four-day conference of the Associated Junior Leagues of America.

Miss Lane's "The Dark Warrior" won first prize in the sculptor class and was called by a Cincinnati reviewer, "the most striking entry of all" and was described as a "stunning dog."

Second prize was given to Miss Lamb for her "Study of a Girl" in water colors and pastels class, and Miss Sturgis received honorable mention for her "line drawing" in the special class.

Contrasts in Costuming Favored

By ANN ARDEN

EUROPEANS think that every American woman is a sporting person. But as one man said about us, "All the sporting this some American women do is to run away from Sport."

* * *

THAT'S NOT exactly it, but a lot of us do like to sit around in easy chairs and watch what is going on.

* * *

WE CAN'T be dressed up in sweaters and very short skirts for that exciting activity, but we have our appropriate clothes just the same.

* * *

THIS YEAR there is a great change in this sort of costuming. The new note is the one of contrast which is perhaps more fascinating for this sort of attire than for any other.

* * *

THE MOST soothing part about it is that it brings into being those suits which can be juggled about—one coat with any other dress and with skirts and bloomers of various sorts.

* * *

* * *

THE HAT is white in suede finish felt, closely stitched, and banded in striped ribbon. Plaids and stripes—in scarfs, skirts, blouses and dresses—a smart way to introduce contrast.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser, or Station WAAB.

Etiquette

Merely a Thoughtful Matter of Precaution

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When one is given a glass of water on a plate should one take the glass from the plate or take both; that is, take the plate holding the glass? A. B.

When one is given a glass of water on a plate one should take the plate with the glass. The plate is for protection, and may catch a drop of water that otherwise might fall on one's very best party dress. In other words, there is a real point in taking the plate, too.

Marmalade and Cream Cheese Problems

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Is it correct to eat marmalade with a spoon, or to put it on toast with a knife?

2—Should cream cheese be eaten with a fork, or put on crackers with a knife? D. B.

1—It is best to put it on the toast with the individual butter-knife. The pieces of toast should be small, one or two mouthfuls.

2—This, too, should be spread on the cracker with the individual butter-knife.

Mother—as Usual—Knows Best

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Should a call be made on the mother of the bride after the wedding? My mother and I have had an argument—quite friendly—about this, and mother maintains that this was done when she "was a girl" and that it is still correct. What say you?

WANTS TO KNOW.

Mother is right. It was, as she said, correct when she was stepping forth as a young girl, to call on the mother of the bride after the wedding, and, as she says, it is still correct. You see, the idea is that the mother of the bride was the hostess on the occasion, and so we must show our honor to our hostess by calling on her after her party, as we would after any other formal party. You owe Mother an apology!

Lavish Gowns at Big Paris Socials

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL

Universal Service Correspondent

Paris, May 20—While the smart set may be seen today visiting some of the haunts on the Left Bank, famous for "La Vie De Boheme," still socialites continue the invasion of the "most favored places" and the international social life courses through its regular round.

Of recent social events, perhaps the most important was Mrs. E. Berry Wall's reception at the Ritz. Mrs. Walter E. Edge, wife of the ambassador, was present in a blue and white creation with matching hat and Mme. Jacques Balsan, the former Consuelo Vanderbilt, chose the black that so well becomes her.

Among the many guests were Mrs. John A. Logan, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, Mrs. Vanderbilt Barton, Mrs. Adolphe Pavenstadt, Mrs. Tarn McGraw, Mrs. A. Kingsley Macomber, Mrs. William Littauer and Mrs. John B. Worden.

At Ambassadeurs

The popular Ambassadeurs always afford a glimpse of well-known social figures, and Mrs. James Corrigan, Mme. Andre Lord and Miss Beth Leary are often among those giving parties there. Mrs. George Wakefield, in white crepe satin; Mme. Nino Lo Sario, the former Katherine Brooks; the American-born Mme. Tripkovitch, in an ensemble of two shades of green, and the Princess Karageorgevitch, in beige and white printed chiffon, were also noticed one day.

Princess Francoise of France, Greece and Denmark continues to astound conservative Parisians by dining publicly. Near her is the Ambassadeurs was the former Princess Paley, now Mme. Lucien Lelong, in a smock and white ensemble, the bodice of which was in white crepe de chine that joined a black crepe skirt of irregular hemline.

Spangled Dress

Mme. Paul Dubonnet, the former Jean Nash, appeared at the Ambassadeurs in a pearl spangled dress tightly fitted from bosom to knees, where there was a delightful flare.

Mme. Rene D'Estainville, the former Rita Redhead, was in red chiffon; Miss Mary Lewis in white satin and Mrs. James Townsend Russell, Jr., in black and yellow printed chiffon.

Lady Rothermere's luncheon in her Quai Voltaire apartment was also notable. Her guests included Baroness Neufville, whose full length coat had a jacket of ermine joined to a black cloth skirt, and Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli, also in black with a short white scarf attaching to the collar with clips.

THE REAL CLARA BOW — By Louella Parsons

Clara Defies Mother; Enters Beauty Contest

Her Father's Last $6 Spent for Photographs to Gratify Her Wishes

(Yesterday, Louella O. Parsons revealed the early life of the famous "It" girl, telling how grief and poverty robbed her of joy and happiness even in childhood. Today, Miss Parsons continues, drawing a picture of a girl, thrilled with desires to enter the movies, but held back not only by poverty and lack of opportunity, but by her mother who declared that she would never permit Clara to appear in films.)

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service.

CHAPTER III

Poverty, sickness and unhappiness were the three specters that followed Clara Bow through her girlhood days. There were times when she scarcely had enough to eat. Her clothes were always shabby, and finally, one day after she had been in the Brooklyn high school two years, she decided to take a secretarial course.

"I want to help make a living," she told her father. "I want the things that other girls have."

The Bows were then living in one room in a cousin's house.

Her father, who was born of good people, had neglected his opportunities for an education, but he was eager for Clara to continue her schooling.

"I only had $3 in my pocket when I married your mother," he told her, "and I have never been able to earn much since. I want you to educate yourself so you can do something worth while in the world. I tramped the streets of New York as a boy and I want something better for my daughter."

Ribbon Rouge Pennies for Movies

Clara finally agreed to wait two weeks before she took up her secretarial course. She told me one day when she had luncheon with me at the Paramount studios that she used to save every penny she could to go to the movies.

She rouged her lips with red ribbon and tried to mimic every actress she saw.

"My mother," Clara said, "was very religious. She scolded me when I tried to act, but in the back of my mind always was the fact that one day I would go into the movies.

"I read in the Motion Picture Magazine that a contest was being held right in Brooklyn. I showed the advertisement to my father.

"'If you let me enter that contest,' I told him, 'I will do whatever you ask—even go back to school.'"

Robert Bow, whose help has been invaluable in writing these articles, told me that he only had $6 in the world at the time Clara wanted to enter the contest.

"Look at her," he said, "if you will make pictures for $6 I know she will win the contest." The photographer agreed and the pictures were sent to the contest editor.

"I admit," said Robert Bow, "I was skeptical. I told Clara the contest wasn't on the square, that it was only a business proposition and that the winner had probably already been selected. But it meant so much to her I hadn't the heart to refuse her.

"When we reached home after the picture were made, my wife unbraided me for spending our last cent on photographs. 'Even if Clara wins,' she said, 'I will not permit a daughter of mine to go into motion pictures. I have been religious all my life and Clara isn't going to lead a life of sin.'

"Clara and I had to whisper when we wanted to talk about the contest. Finally, she and I went to Eugene V. Brewster's office, where the contest was being held," said Mr. Bow. "The judges were three famous artists, Hoyos McMein, Harrison Fisher and Howard Chandler Christy.

No Cheer for Her Mother Opposed Movies

"Oh, we have thousands of pictures," he told us.

"Your photograph doesn't even look much like you."

"Clara and I went home discouraged. Her mother, to whom even the mention of motion pictures was enough to give her a headache, had to be spared. She heard us talking and I had to shield Clara from her annoyance. The movies were an obsession with her."

Clara had always felt if her mother had been in better health she would have sympathized with her in her screen ambitions.

"She loved me so dearly," said Clara, "and she wanted me to be happy, but you see she was limited in her ideas because she was brought up by a straight-laced mother, to whom even dancing was a sin. My mother taught me to pray and to believe in God, and even now when everything is dark and there doesn't seem to be a single ray of light, I get down on my knees and say the childish prayer she taught me."

"Do you believe," Clara once asked me, "that the people who love you and who have gone on are standing near to help you?"

I told Clara I did believe that any mother who had loved her child would never be entirely separated from her.

"Clara's eyes glowed. "That's the way I feel," she said. "I don't often talk about it, but I know when I am facing my greatest trouble my mother is near and that her love and her understanding are helping me solve my problems."

Returning to the time when clara Bow awaited the verdict of the motion picture contest judges. It is interesting to note that this mother to whom Clara lavished affection and love all through the years was unable to understand at any time her daughter's interest in motion pictures.

Robert Bow tells of the days that he and Clara tiptoed through the poor little room in Brooklyn trying not to upset the sick mother by appearing too eager for news from the contest.

At last, after waiting for what seemed weeks, which in reality was only a brief three days, a telegram came asking Clara to call at the Motion Picture Magazine offices on Duffifield st., Brooklyn.

Clara wore a cheap little plaid dress and a red tam o' shanter. The little dress, which cost about 98 cents, had been made by a cousin. Clara, in describing that day, told me that she felt very well satisfied with herself until she walked into Eugene Brewster's office. There sat girls, women and their escorts, dressed in the height of style.

"They looked me over," Clara said, "and now, when I think back and realize how funny I must have looked, I do not blame them for laughing. At that time I was sensitive about my poverty, and I wanted to get out of that office where women dressed in expensive furs and velvet gowns ridiculed my poor home-made dress. My heart sank. I was foolish, I said to myself, to think I could compete with those rich girls."

After several moments of being stared at Clara ran from the room, not caring much where she went just so she could get away from these other contestants.

TOMORROW — Clara's first experience in the movies.

CLARA GETS EARLY STAGE ADVICE...

"IT GIRL" IN FILMING OF DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS

Youthful Clara Bow, seemingly timid as she starts her stage life in amateur shows in Brooklyn, was soon getting good advice from men and women on the stage. She was soon to become a star before the camera. Naval and sea plays seem to be her forte. She has appeared in many of them.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

O' THIS AND O' THAT

I'm glad I wasn't the stew who was at the bottom of five guys in that cab the other night who sat on him to keep him still . . . And I don't wanna be the Scollay sq. beggar who is in the hospital from drinking his own "across the border" brand . . . What looks more inane that a gal carrying her hat in her hand while a fur scarf adorns her neck? . . . And who almost did a rigor mortis when the number he had been playing for five years at a V a day came out after he had dropped it as a bad job? . . . When will the clocks down town ever chime the hour at the same time? . . . Also, when will that umpchay stop carrying a loaded water pistol a la Gerald Chapman? . . . Why did she break his heart until death when she just led him on in spite her sister? . . . And why doesn't a ciggie do what is advertised when you're trying to write a colyum? . . . Doesn't a woman know the meaning of a closed door? . . . PRIVACY, dammit, PRIVACY!

WHO'S TREMBLING

To whom are the gentle hints directed re the bottle throwing at the referee at the wrasslin' match the other night? . . . And who's knees are trembling? . . . When will these suburban motor cops start chasing a speeder immediately instead of letting him get a good start and them giving the natives a show in driving the two-bunger . . . And when, oh when, will the El start up their escalator in State st.? . . . My poor dogs! . . . What mag is a certain guy thinking of trying to ban in this town of learning and culture? . . . Why does that guy in the spic and span hamburger joint make 'em so delicious that yo gotta put away half a dozen before you can leave? . . . With me penny pinching . . . What did the donor of the match-head loaded cigar receive for his generosity the other night from the stumblebum? . . .

Who dashed out of a Mass. ave. cigar store the other night on the hotfoot to be stopped by a bull who thought it was a stick-up? . . . If the bull is fired it won't be hard to guess why . . . Why do chinks always have such a hard job walking when wearing patent leathers? . . . What sealed Washington st. big driver has a crush on a sweet 16 school gal? . . . And why do mail carriers look so forlorn? . . . And who let his gal demonstrate the old one-two on his chin and woke up with his head on her lap? . . . Who felt heavy for the perfume racket and is scared to weigh? . . . And what paper is gumshoeing on a story they are trying to scoop the town with? . . . And who started this bunk about sleeping in the raw?

WHY, OH WHY?

Why do fond mammas still permit it thinking its cute when their kids wipe their shoes over your class panties? . . . Grrrrr! . . . Could be surrounded if I told you who is one of the best cribbage players in the Hub . . . Ask Arthur Norton is dating brotherly love . . . Gentleman! . . . When is Bill Cunningham's "Consolidated Marriage" (his first talkie), coming to town? . . . I wonder if that bookseller will ever take in his outstandings with the boys on the rags? . . . When will E. B. Rideout grow a deep voice? . . . And when will these dames who aren't built for 'em stop wearing fishnet hose?

HIS CORSET WAS TIGHT

Who has a little colored lad come into his store every day so he can rub his dome for luck? . . . And what stickler almost choked when his corset would'nt loosen after a heavy meal? . . . What is more out of place than a gal in evening dress in an El train? . . . And what's become of miniature golf? . . . Upon who's knob did a bottle of peroxide spill while bending over the sink at home? . . . He's still out of work . . . Who wrote a "short" 3000-word note to his gal the other night? . . . And who is getting his gas chariot overhauled for the big border dash? . . . You must tell me the name of that big, but trustiwee who daily adorns the ash of his truck with a white carnation . . . And what looks prettier than a red-headed girl with long curls? . . . I know . . . Two of 'em . . . And who has a finer memory than Tom McLean, Post telegrapher? . . . And who doesn't marvel at Anton Otto Fischer's illustrations in the Saturday Evening Post? . . . And when will that Chelsea gal stop acting like a kid when you cross her wishes . . . What rag is mucho-doing-about-nothing on its 100th birthday this year?

AIRMAN SPOTS A STILL, TROOPS SEIZE IT

Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., May 20 (AP)—The army used its aviation and infantry units to detect and seize a still in operation in a thick patch of woods on the reservation here, close by several high explosive storage magazines.

Two men were arrested and two escaped.

The soldiers, under command of Col. Edward M. Shinkle, were directed to the still by Lieut. Mark Woodward, who flew over the area in which it had been reported by a guard.

The still was discovered by a soldier making his rounds on a motorcycle. He reported to his officers the operators had offered him "five dollars a week to keep quiet." The soldier said he accepted the offer to keep the men from fleeing until the arrests could be made.

Those captured identified themselves as Percy Brazil, 21, of Tarboro, N. C., and William Isaac, 26, of Roanoke County, Virginia. They were taken to a Baltimore police station.

Dope in Prison

Atlanta, Ga., May 20—Seizure of 150 grains of narcotics on the person of an inmate of the federal prison here was reported by government officials.

ITALY BREAKS WITH GERMANY IN COUNCIL

Geneva, May 20 (AP)—Renewed debate in the League of Nations Council today on the principle of limiting trained reserves and war materials disclosed that Germany had lost Italy's support in this controversy over the provisions of a projected general disarmament treaty.

The question was raised when the Council attempted to determine the form of a questionnaire which the states will be requested to fill out preliminary to the conference next February. The form would disclose the current state of each country's armaments.

HENDERSON OBJECTS.

Aristide Briand, speaking for France, reiterated his country's case against limiting trained reserves and supported Mr. Henderson's suggestion of a tabular form harmonizing with the provisions of the draft convention produced by the preparatory commission.

ISSUE IS TABLED

Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister, also cast his vote for the British formula, asserting that the Italian government believes the question of principia should not be reopened. At the preparatory commission Italy supported the German stand.

The issue was tabled until Friday.

Geneva was selected as the place for the general disarmament conference next February.

GARY COOPER PICKED TO HEAD CAST OF "BROKEN WINGS" FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, May 20—If Gary Cooper follows the instructions of Lupe Velez he will keep out of mischief. Lupe, leaving the 23d for a vaudeville tour, has laid down the law for Gary, telling him what to do and what not to do, and, strangely enough, Gary seems to like it.

"The two of them make an amusing pair, Gary so tall, so lanky, so silent; Lupe so small, so full of fire and so vivacious, and so like a little twi ttering brown wren.

Louella O. Parsons

Gary will be so busy Lupe won't have to worry much. As soon as he finishes "Laurels and the Lady," opposite Ruth Chatterton, he will be starred in an aviation play called "Broken Wings" was one of the first of the aviation plays and, as I remember, it stayed on Broadway for some time, and it played to crowded houses.

THE WIT of Malibu, Al Boasberg, is the latest writer signed by Howard Hughes to try his hand on "Aces Up." His is the 16th to : called in to assist on this story. Spencer Tracy and George Cooper have two important roles and that reminds me "Aces Up" is now being called "Ground Hogs." Somehow one feels a little sad at the mention of this picture for I remember discussing the story with Louis Wolheim. He had planned to do it following "Front Page." No one has yet been chosen to take his place. No one ever can take his place for Louis Wolheim is one person who will never be forgotten.

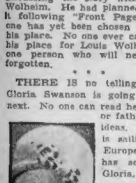
THERE IS no telling what Gloria Swanson is going to do next. No one can read her mind or fathom her ideas. Gloria is sailing for Europe. She has sent for Gloria, the second, to join her in New York and she will take her little girl abroad. That indicates that "Love of Sunya" will not be made for a long, long time. Accordi ng to our best sleuths in New York Gloria is still peeved at Sam Goldwyn and she has no intention of making up with him right away. I hear that it hasn't been easy for Gloria to raise the money to finance "Rockabye." Money, you know, is a little bit tight in the big town and the people who used to be millionaires can no longer be classed in that category.



Gloria Swanson

HERE IS one song writer who didn't take the train when most of the writers hit the trail back to New York. He stayed and started writing stories and the fact that he has just adapted "I'm Tellin' Ya" to RKO—Pathe shows that his labors have not been in vain. His name is George Green and he is not only writing stories but he is getting a chance to direct. "I'm Tellin' Ya" will be James Gleason's first picture in the comedy series adapted from Rugs Rae's "Ruffcuts" and all of them give Jimmie Gleason a chance to create a certain type of comedy role. Olive Cooper who is taken from the Duffy shows will play Mr. Gleason's wife through the series. Russell Gleason, who was to have been with his father, is quite sick with laryngitis and unable to be in the first picture.

• • •

THINGS WE hear in passing: Victor Schertzinger will direct "The Bird of Paradise." He has a new contract with Radio Pictures which means five pictures instead of the four originally planned. Raymond Hatton can be located at RKO-Pathe studios. He is playing a part in Tay Garnett's next picture. Hobart Bosworth will play opposite Edna May Oliver in "Fannie Foley Herself." Miss Oliver's first starring vehicle for Radio Pictures. M. H. Hoffman, whom I chanced to see at the Cocoanut Grove, will start producing soon with his son. He has purchased a novel by E. Norton Hough, dealing with the question of whether life is better with or without children. It is called "Without Children."

I HAD no idea that Estelle Taylor was to play the mother in "Street Scene." Everyone knew that as soon as she finished with Ronald Colman in "The Unholy Garden," she would go to work for King Vidor in Elmer Rice's play but some way I cannot place Estelle who is vivacious and scarcely old enough to be the mother of a grown daughter. As the mother, however, Miss Taylor is the choice and knowing Estelle as we do we feel she will do a good job. She is going abroad as soon as she finishes "Street Scene." Speaking of going abroad, I had a note from Doris Kenyon. As soon as she finishes her job at First National, she too, will sail for Europe to study abroad. Doris has been marvelously brave, fighting her battle without her beloved husband, Milton Sills, as best she could.

FUNNY IN Hollywood how rumors get circulated. Lowell Sherman has gone to Samuel Goldwyn to act in one picture. Then he returns to Radio Pictures to direct Stephen Sept ember. His contract is up in September and the gossip is that it will not be renewed. Radio Pictures, however, denies this. But I do know that Lowell is getting $3000 a week to direct and certain of the other Radio players are registered as kicking that they were underpaid in comparison with this magnificent salary. Come what may, Mr. Sherman is a fine actor and he is one who need never worry about getting a job.

SNAPSHOTS OF Hollywood collected at random: MIKE LEVEE playing the piano for the guests of MR. AND MRS. JACK WARNER. His wife, ROSE LEVEE, MRS. HUNT STROMBERG and MRS. WARNER all wearing up-to-the-minute, smart pajamas. EDDIE CANTOR and CHICO MARX clowning for the guests. IRVING ASHER playing cards with five women. JACK WARNER, JR., showing his skill with the drum, his father with the piano. Most of the guests going in swimming in the Warner pool. "PEE" CARLE, a member of the Paramount publicity department, receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter. HAROLD HURLEY giving him some advice on how to bring up a girl. HAROLD'S DAUGHTER is ages six weeks, flourishing. PAUL SNELL also at Paramount, adding his advice. Great year for Paramount, three births within a few months. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

"Ground Hogs"

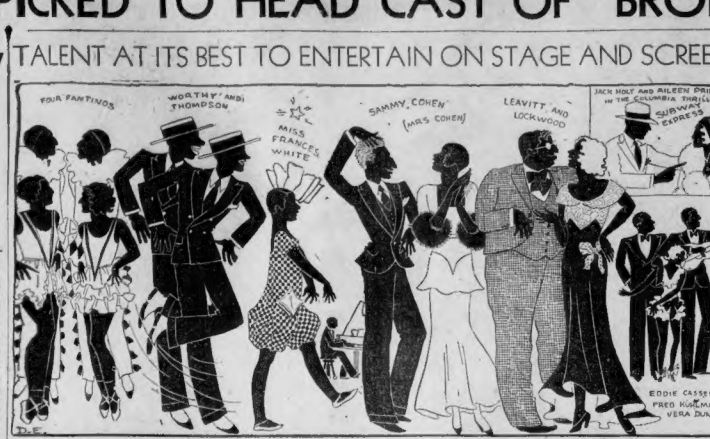
TALENT AT ITS BEST TO ENTERTAIN ON STAGE AND SCREEN



At the RKO Keith-Boston this week there is a galaxy of talent. On screen is the mystery thriller, "Subway Express," while on the stage is an excellent bill of vaudeville, topped by that classy singing comedienne, Frances White.

Stage Who's Who

Helen F. Cohan, of the third generation of the famous Cohan family, is making her first appearance in Boston in the company her father is heading, presenting "Friendship" at the Tremont. She has a fling at pictures to her credit and believes there is more chance for development in the theater than before the Kleig lights. Her ambition is to appear as leading lady playing opposite to her illustrious father. That is what she is aiming for.

Helen F. Cohan

Spring Revue to Aid Fund

The one big feature and early spring revue of Dame Fashion's latest in the modern dress for women will be staged May 22 to 27, inclusive, in Horticultural Hall under the auspices of the Royal Arcanum and for the aid of their hospital fund. This Fashion Show and Revue is the means adopted by the Royal Arcanum for their hospital renewed. Radio Pictures, however, deny this. But I do know that Lowell is getting $3000 a week and certain of the other Radio players are registered as kicking that they were underpaid in comparison with this magnificent salary. Come what may, Mr. Sherman is a fine actor and he is one who need never worry about getting a job.

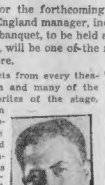
Sally Moody

In keeping with the Royal Arcanum policy of not asking for patronage without giving a real show in return, 20 models will parade a specially constructed and brilliantly lighted runway, displaying all sorts of fashion creations.

Leaders of Theater to Honor Charles Winston at Dinner

Plans for the forthcoming dinner to Charles L. Winston, RKO New England manager, indicate that the welcome home reception and banquet, to be held at the Copley-Plaza next Wednesday evening, will be one of the most elaborate affairs of its kind ever held here.

Headline acts from every theater in Boston and many of the big-time favorites of the stage, will be on hand to provide one of the biggest and best entertainment bills ever assembled. Hundreds of Mr. Winston's friends are combining to make the affair unique in the annals of the theater, and a committee headed by Joseph H. Brennan, manager of Loew's State, report that from present indications a record attendance will be on hand to extend a welcome to the popular manager who has recently returned to Boston after a long illness.



Charles Winston

The honorary committee is headed by Gov. Joseph B. Ely and includes the names of Mayor James M. Curley, Postmaster William E. Hurley, Superintendent Michael H. Crowley, Caspar G. Bacon, Comm. Edward F. McLaughlin, Comm. Theodore Roemer, Gen. Alfred P. Foote, Comm. Joseph A. Conry, Frank A. Goodwin, Col. William J. Keville, Edward P. Barry, John F. Fitzgerald, James H. Brennan, Judge Walter S. Collins and Malcolm E. Nichols.

Application for reservations may be made to the chairman, Joseph H. Brennan, Loew's State theater or to the secretary, James J. McGuinness, Allied Theaters Association at 60 Scollay sq.

Archainbaud's Next

George Archainbaud, Radio Pictures director, is next to direct "Chicago Dove" for R-K-O. Wallace Smith is at present writing the screen version. Archainbaud is now working on "Hells," with Betty Compson Conrad Nagel, Arline Judge, Ruth Weston and Lita Chevret.

Novarro in "Daybreak" at the State Friday

Opening Friday on the screen at Loew's State will be Ramon Novarro's latest starring picture, "Daybreak." "Daybreak" is an adaptation by Ruth Cummings and Cyril Hume of Dr. Arthur Schnitzler's highly successful romance of Vienna before the war. Jacques Feyder of Paris was assigned to direct the film in order to preserve the distinctive continental flavor of the charming locale. The story is of the debonair officer and love adventurer, Lt. Willie Kasda, for whom love has been just a game until he meets Laura. He cannot marry her, because an impecunious officer must marry a wealthy girl.

"The Secret Six" at the Orpheum on Friday

"The Secret Six," with Wallace Beery in the featured role, is the screen attraction opening at Loew's Orpheum Friday. Topping the new vaudeville bill will be Jim Toney with Thelma Temple, in a comedy offering called "What the Public Wants." The Vercell Sisters, late of Earl Carroll's Vanities, are another highlight of the bill in a dance presentation entitled "A Study in Rhythm." Lou Kruger and Charles Robles in "At the Bank-Wet," and the Four Casting Stars in "In the Air" are included on the bill. Miscellaneous short features and Hearst Metrotone News complete the program.

GENERAL'S BODY IS FOUND IN WRECKAGE

Tours, France, May 20 (AP)—Police and volunteers directed by French army engineers today recovered the body of General Robert H. Dunlap, U. S. M. C., from the ruins of a barn adjoining the chateau of Cing-Mars, where he was buried under a landslide yesterday.

They also brought out the body of Denis Briant, a farmer on the estate, and rescued Mme. Briant, alive but badly injured.

Her leg, crushed by a falling wall, was amputated by a surgeon who had remained at the place all night, in the hope that the three might still be living when the debris was cleared away. She was taken to a hospital in a critical condition.

The woman had taken refuge in an ancient cave over which the barn was built. There was air there and when the rescuers heard her cries early this morning they ran down a tube through which they fed her some milk.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Around the World trip was made by the British motorship Silverpalm which came into the port of Boston directly from China, Japan, the Philippines, Dutch East Indies and Straits Settlements. She was one of the few arrivals from overseas coming into the port yesterday.

CAPE ANN ARRIVES

Disabled on the fishing grounds and short on provisions, the schooner Cape Ann, out of Gloucester, which was aided into her own port by the United States Coast Guard patrol came to the Fish Pier to market her fare caught off Georges Banks. She carried 12,000 pounds of halibut, 12,000 pounds of salted cod and 18,000 pounds of fresh cod.

FOUR-MASTER

Passenger and freight packet service between the Cape de Verde islands and the Gold and Ivory Coast of Africa will be started by the four-masted Boston schooner Bradford E. Jones. She is the property of New Bedford shippers who will use her in this trade. She once had been laid up in Boothbay Harbor, the port in which she was built 12 years ago, for the past 16 months. She will be towed to Portland Harbor for equipment.

His new duties will include the buying responsibility for summer furniture.

ROW ON BARRING 'COMMUTERS' IS SETTLED

Washington, May 20 (INS)—Hope was felt at the State Department and in Canadian circles here today that the controversy resulting from the barring of Canadian commuters to the United States, has been settled by an exchange of notes between Sec. Stimson and Canadian Charge D'Affaires Hume Wrong.

In effect, Canadian commuters will be given the same consideration as if they were actually residents in the United States, on temporary visas, who returned to Canada or any other foreign country and re-entered within six months.

Stimson's note incorporated an involved statement concerning the status of the so-called immigrant commuters, prepared by the legal division of the Immigration Bureau, which, officials said, made the success of the plan largely contingent on the good faith of the Labor Department.

The controversy between the two governments grew out of action by the American immigration authorities in the vicinity of Detroit in making a check on the so-called commuters who were coming in undisturbed under an agreement obtained from the Labor Department in 1927.

The queer little "ship house," immortalized by Dickens in his David Copperfield, has been condemned by the building authorities of Gravesend, England. This quaint house, made from the inverted hull of an old sailing vessel, has been occupied for more than one hundred years. Read the story of it in the American Weekly section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

HOOVER CALLS PARLEY TO CUT P. O. DEFICIT

Washington, May 20 (AP)—Officials of the Postoffice Department today were requested by President Hoover to meet him this week-end at Rapidan camp for conference on possible economies.

The postal authorities will be the third group to meet with Mr. Hoover at his camp to study ways of curtailing expenditures.

Two weeks ago War Department chiefs were summoned and last week Interior Department heads met with the President.

The War Department outlined an economy program, the major feature of which would be abandonment of a number of army posts and a concentration of department activities. This program it was estimated, would save approximately $20,000,000.

The Interior Department decided to postpone non-essential capital outlays to the extent of approximately $4,000,000 during the next fiscal years. Steps were taken to effect a saving for the following two years which would bring the total economies for three years to approximately $17,000,000.

The postoffice is one of the largest and most expensive government activities.

37 STATES PLAN CHAIN TAXES

New York, May 20 (AP)—Thirty-seven states and the federal government have anti-chain store legislation on the statute books, according to M. M. Zimmerman, chain store counsel, said today, in commenting on the upholding by the Federal Supreme Court of the Indiana tax law.

"There are some 85 laws pending in these 37 states," Mr. Zimmerman said, "many of which are undoubtedly discriminatory. But the Indiana law may provide the outlet which the chain foes have long been seeking, and it is likely that many of these laws will be changed to conform to it in outline.

The Indiana law provides that one store shall pay $25 a year the next five stores, $50 each, the next five, $75, the next five, $200, and stores thereafter $25 each.

"Of about 30000 chain stores in 1929 are called national chains. These 1600 probably account for more than half the chain store volume, and it is on these that the Indiana and other state legislation apparently is directed."

How the ancient Egyptians worshipped their gods and many of their strange and curious customs are further revealed in tomb paintings recently deciphered by famous Egyptologists. Read about this in the American Weekly section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Boston Near the Top in Educating Its Adult Workers

New York, May 20 (AP)—New York was behind Boston, Washington, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cleveland, Cal., and Akron, O., in its facilities for adult education, according Miller, director of the Workers Education Bureau of America, in an address at the closing general session of the American Association of Adult Education.

"Instead of leading in the march against ignorance and inefficiency of the unschooled and unskilled laboring classes, New York is actually bringing up the rear guard," Mr. Miller said.

Only 25 per cent of those attending day and evening schools in New York are receiving instruction in adult education courses, he said.

Lost Gun Brings Six Months' Term

Oliver G. Gilbert of the South End lost a revolver last night and today he dropped into court and paid a fine to get it back.

Arrested last night at the East Dedham station for the weapon and found it was there.

In municipal court, however, Judge Zottoli found him guilty of carrying firearms without a permit and decreed he should spend six months in jail. He appealed.

VETS ARE URGED TO ORGANIZE

El Paso, Tex., May 20 (AP)—Senator Bronson Cutting, Republican, of New Mexico, said in a speech before the Borderland Chapter of Disabled War Veterans that excessive taxes would not receive their desserts from the government until they presented an organized front.

Senator Cutting scored President Hoover and others for efforts in adverse passage of the adjusted compensation bill. He asserted that the power over the President's veto was after all ex-service men's organization had failed to unite upon.

"The veterans must remember," the senator said, "that the politicians are organized against the veterans and that they will do everything possible to keep veterans unorganized."

EARTH TREMORS ROCK 2 CITIES

By the Associated Press

The populations of two widely separated cities—Lisbon, Portugal, and Oaxaca, Mexico—were frightened by earthshocks today and last night.

In Portugal's capital city two sharp tremors were felt early today, beginning at 3:20 a. m. Although they created panic among the inhabitants who deserted their homes and fled into streets and cellars, there were no casualties.

Liquor Car Goes Down Cellar, But Suspect Caught

Fred Jamini of 50 North Margin st was arrested in the North End today charged with illegally keeping and possessing a quantity of alcohol.

Special Officers Goodwin, Collins and Thayer while cruising along Endicott st. claim they saw Jamini leave a car with a gallon can and drop it into a cellar further down the street. They nabbed Jamini and one of them managed to save a quart of the contents of one can which was smashed in the fall.

BOND MANAGER HELD AS THIEF

New York, May 20 (AP) Accused of defrauding the Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Company, of which he was manager, of $50,000 in three years, Walter Hamill was in the police lineup today on a grand larceny charge.

Police said Hamill admitted stealing $18,000 by filing false claims, but denied his thefts were $50,000. He was arrested last night at the company's offices.

He has worked for the company almost 17 years and was made manager three years ago.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1931

LISTENING WOMEN

JOHN GATHERED HER INTO HIS ARMS

MARY AND JOHN had been married five years and nothing had happened. That was the trouble with Mary's days, nothing happened. Each day was the same. The bridge club, an occasional matinee, then the long evenings while John read his paper and she sat there pretending to read; in reality wondering if they'd have to go on like this forever.

Of course she loved John, but somehow when she was being given engagement-showers, then the excitement of their marriage, then the search for a home, then getting settled, things were humming. There was action, romance. Now the days lagged and the evenings palled.

Small wonder when dashing Bert Commins had appeared on her doorstep to sell her a car, that after a few of his sales-talks she had not been averse to taking a demonstration ride and then more demonstration rides. Bert's large eyes swept admirably over her as he explained the advantages of the car, its outstanding greenhide, its instant pick-up, while Mary wondered why John couldn't dress and act like Bert. After a few demonstrations tests they had driven so far that it was only natural to have tea; now it had been several teas and several luncheons.

Terribly Attractive

But Mary's Not in Love

Mary wasn't falling in love with him, but she did find him terribly attractive and the daredevil gayety gave her something to rejoice during the long evening with John.

Then came a time when she wished she could spend every minute of her life with Bert, thinking what a blessing it would be if only John could fall in love with someone else. Not, of course, that Bert had actually said anything, but his eyes had spoken volumes.

Her telephone buzzed. Mary wondered if it were Bert; but it was a woman's voice. She remembered it as that belonging to the town scandal-monger, and had a moment's panic. Suppose she had been seen on one of the trips with Bert!

"Pardon me?" She tried to keep her voice calm, serene.

The woman's tones were acid. "I simply said, my dear, that the new tea-room is charming."

Mary wondered what she was driving at. "I'm sure it is. I must try it sometime."

"Food Is Excellent"

Phoned Scandal-Monger

"And the food is excellent," went on the busybody. "But I suppose John has told you all about it."

"John? What does John know about it?"

The other almost purred. "Well, he was certainly enjoying his lunch there today. Although I must admit he wasn't paying much attention to what he was eating."

"Yes, I always contend that men are terribly funny about their food except when they're sitting across from a pretty face. And when I say pretty, I mean pretty. Of course John always has had good taste in women—take yourself. But for his own sake I felt like telling him he was really laughing louder than the occasion warranted. And they found more interesting topics to discuss! His companion alternately laughed and wept.

Artificial Flower Racket Proves Flop

William R. McCarthy's new racket to relieve unemployment cost him $25 in Dorchester court today. Sergt. William D. Thomson of Mattapan told Judge Welsh he discovered McCarthy loading an automobile with wreaths of artificial flowers which the policeman claimed McCarthy had removed from graves in New Calvary Cemetery.

"What are you going to do with them?" asked Sergt. Thompson.

"Sell them to florists," said McCarthy. "They give me two bits each for them. I'm out of a job and this is the only way I could think of to make a living."

OPEN SEASON

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

Open season an; time at all, and all of the time, for this bright bird! Gloriette doesn't have to look at the sky to check up on the well known "Southerly wind and a cloudy sky." She just sallies out in her very prettiest outfit, instead of punks and breeches, any day, any time, any place, finding each precious day a "hunting day," for the sly game called Cupid.

Eros' mother, Venus, and all the world of poets since her day have done so, too, did quite a bit of boasting about his rare qualities, his beauty, his keenness, his might with the bow and arrow, his wit, his honey-dripping tongue, his rare gold plumage and his hair of fourteen-carat gold, his swiftness of flight that carries him like light ahead of any missile except one of his own arrows! She pretended to harpoon, but told with pride of his slyness, his craft, his wariness, his guile.

So since the beginning of Father Time himself, Love has been made precious quarry. And a hunter of prey himself that was to be run from if you didn't wound him first!

Oh bird of bright burning beauty!—all the world longs for you, dead or alive—but most of all they crave you where you like least of all to be—in a cage! Men pore over their material affairs—but in the corner of their eyes they see the flicker of your wings, and in the farthermost tiny corridor of their ear under the roar of the subway and the whirr of the market and the shattering ramming-home of rivets on sky-piercing buildings, is heard the silken rustle of your wings.

Boys and girls grow up to dream of you. Women ponder on clothes, food, house-decorating, face-decorating, but it's all for LOVE. He flutters across the memories of grandmothers. The impression of his foot is still on the ancient heart of a grandpere. The heart is slower and dryer—but the impression remains. Of the tread of LOVE the DESIRABLE—the DESIRED.

Love's loose in the world—and the season is never closed.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

GIRL TELLS WHY SHE SOUGHT TO DIE FOR LOVE

Edna Swanson didn't say it as evenly as that, because she was sobbing today through lips that still burned from the poison she took last night on an Everett street corner through despondency after being scorned by her "boy friend."

She is only 19, and the sweetheart who declares forgot her is Allen C. Griffin, 20, of Princeton st. Medford, a radio singer, whose voice, sobbing in a torch song through the ether, thrilled her night after night.

"I just couldn't bear it last night when I saw other girls laughing, and happy," the Everett girl said today, through her tears.

"When I met him and found out who he was, I just couldn't believe it was true. I had heard him sing over the radio and liked his voice. I felt just like a girl in a story, but the story hasn't turned out as I thought it would at all.

"After we became acquainted, he used to sing one song over the radio just for me. When he sang, 'You Came to Me From Out of Nowhere,' that was our secret—because we met when he gave me a ride one night in an automobile.

"Last summer we had trouble, but patched it up, and in November had a quarrel again, but that also was fixed. He told me his parents objected to him going with me.

"Then, a few weeks ago, he told me he didn't want to see me any more. I have been unhappy ever since—and last night I felt I could bear it no longer, and I drank the poison."

Can't Die for Love

Tax Appeals Up

Appeals in tax cases will be heard by the United States Board of Tax Appeals, which will hold a three-week session in the Federal building beginning July 20.

RISE IN INCOME TAX ASKED FOR OLD AGE AID

Motion for a 15 per cent addition to income taxes paid on salaries above $5000 a year to finance the old age assistance act will be made Monday by Representative Sawyer of Ware when the financing is again considered.

Representative Sawyer said that his financing plan would cover the balance of this year and all of 1932.

"This amendment," he said, "is based on a study of the income tax returns and estimates, and will provide a sufficient sum of money to finance the Old Age Assistance by an increased income tax on incomes above $6000.

"Those at present paying a $50 income tax would pay $57.50, while the person paying $100 income tax at present would pay $115.

"The bill is for the remainder of this year and the year 1932 only. I think some other plan may be worked out meanwhile."

Representative Abraham Cannon of Boston will also offer a plan next Monday, his bill imposing a tax of 5 per cent on all amusements.

It is understood that another bill will be offered in the form of a proposal to levy assessments on salaries of those in civil service positions on the ground that civil service pensions are paid by the citizens at large.

Sentence Suspended

A suspended sentence of three months in the House of Correction was imposed in Waltham court on Malcolm H. Elliott of Herbert st., Belmont, on a charge of unlawful possession of lottery tickets.

LUCK SAVES 2 BOYS PLAYING WITH GUN

What with vain ladies' kid curlers and conservative gentlemen's old-fashioned nightshirts at late night blazes, firemen see some startling sights, but Lieut. William Marchall and Fireman Nathaniel Browning of Engine 31, the fireboat, received a real shock today when they saw two boys calmly trying to shoot each other.

To make it even more startling to Lieut. Marshall, the boys, one 10 years old and the other only seven, were in the police house of the lieutenant's own firehouse.

Lieut. Marshall and Browning were on the dock at North End Park when they looked up and saw two pairs of automatic pistols at the other and heard the click of the hammer as the gun failed to discharge.

Then the boy calmly handed the pistol to his companion who, in turn, pointed it at the first youth and pulled the trigger, which again clicked harmlessly.

Breathless, the two firemen reached the pilot house and discovered, to their horror, that the pistol was fully loaded. The reason it had not fired was that the safety catch was on.

The two boys, one from Shrimpton st. and the other from Brook st., East Boston, were taken to the harbor police station, where it was learned that East Boston police were looking for two boys who have been burglarizing stores in that district.

In East Boston, the boys admitted several breaks and said they got the gun after breaking into the office of the Boston Sand & Gravel Co., Condor st., East Boston. They will be in juvenile court.

Jenny Decides to Take Jennifer Away to Camp in Canada

By Fannie Hurst

(Copyright, 1931, by Fannie Hurst.)

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

JENNIFER WAS like something wild, crouching beneath the wing of a protecting arm the bare, gleaming arm of Jenny her muddled eyes staring through the jungle of hair at Rarick, who, having released her wrists, stood back, flabbergasted.

"Shh-h-h, darling I see."

"Make him see."

"Yes, yes, I'll make father see Mother knows. Mother understands. Jennifer's nervous. Jennifer has had a bad dream and mother is going to take her away—far—up to the Canadian camp and get her rested and cured."

Jenny had wrested his moment from him, all right. And he stared at the silence of his heart. There they crouched from him. The Jennys. "Papa" she had mouthed, like a child. So far as he could remember, she had never even in her little-girlhood called him that before.

What a curious thing to have happened! This little girl this sick little girl, this pure good, smart, terribly alien little girl calling him "Papa." And Jenny had wrested his chance. Damn her!

Repulsive to Him

No. No. No. God bless her! This bare-backed woman, with the ridges up her spine that were repulsive to him, was dimly at the moment, as she babbled sentimental music to the girl.

Her sobs began to subside as she looked out fearfully under the wings of her mother's arm.

"I'll get well if he will leave me alone."

"Sh-h-h! Father will leave you alone. Won't you, Rarick, if I promise to help little Jennifer, who wants to get well, to be rid of the idiotic notion that she is in love? Won't you, Rarick? Won't you?" said Jenny, in the monotony of singsong, rocking her body in soothing motion over the crouched figure of Jennifer.

"I won't ever see him again. I don't want ever to see him again——"

"Sh! That's right. She won't ever see him again, Rarick. Don't cry, sweet! Mother will help you. Nothing has happened between them; and for you to see Berry would not only be absurd but dangerous. Your answer to Tom will only be the fact that Jennifer won't ever see Berry again. Isn't that right, Baby?"

"Yes, mother."

"We're going away for a little while. Up to the Canadian camp —to fish—and get well. I'll wire we're arriving." (Ramon could come up for a week.) Aren't we, Jennifer?"

"Yes, darling."

"You, hear, Rarick?" said Jenny, always rocking, always crooning. "We're going to camp—to rest—to get well."

He sat dumb in the pool of his defeat, glorying, in a curious, crooked way, in the power of this angular, eccentric woman he called wife, in mother his children, yet filled with a crushing impotent anger that baffled and tortured him because he could not define it.

Rarick Loses

"You go now, Rarick, while Jenny puts Jennifer to bed and gives her a bromide to make her sleep. Sh-h, my sweet—"

"Put me to sleep, Mother. Don't let me finish dressing to go out and meet him—"

With the sensation of having no sensation at all, Rarick pressed at the hand on his daughter and went stumbling from the room.

* * *

In the 24 years since her brother's marriage, Hildegarde Rarick, teacher in the primary grades in the public schools of Keokuk, had visited him three times. Two of these highly ceremonious occasions had taken place before the migration East.

Miss Rarick was as full of principles regarding her relationship to her brother's rise to fortune as a porcupine is full of quills. And, just so, she bristled with them.

From the very start, when rumors of Rarick's engagement to quite a wealthy St. Louis girl had come floating toward her on wings of exaggerated gossip, Miss Rarick had taken her stand.

Nine years his senior, she had never, to use her own phraseology, been beholden to him, and did not intend to begin to be so now. At well past 50 she was teaching the same grade in the same school, on practically the same basis she had taught at 20. The check for $50, which had ultimately enabled Rarick to leave the farm for Keokuk, where he had boarded in the same house with his sister for two years, had come from Hildegarde.

He remembered this, and off and on for years had tried to

PARENTS TERM SCHOOLHOUSE 'FIRE TRAP'

Petition Circulated to Abolish Germantown Building; American Campaign Is Praised

(This is the sixth of a series of articles on Boston schools, what they have and what they lack and the need for more and more modern schools.)

High praise of the Boston Evening American campaign for more and better public schools in Boston was voiced by Arthur L. Stanek, vice-president of the Germantown Citizens' Association of West Roxbury.

"The Boston Evening American should be heartily congratulated by all mothers and fathers in the city of Boston whose children are caged in fire trap school buildings, for its manifold efforts to rid our wonderful city of 'rural' school houses," said Mr. Stanek.

"The Germantown Citizens' Association hopes that this movement of the Boston American will bring good results in all sections of the city," he said.

School conditions in the West Roxbury district where the Germantown Citizens' Association is active in betterment projects could be vastly improved. The district is in much need of a high school, hundreds of its children traveling nearly three miles twice a day to attend Jamaica Plain high school.

Although Supt of Schools Jeremiah E. Burke proposes the opening of a four-room addition to the Beethoven school in Washington st West Roxbury, next fall, this will not take care of the pupils of the obsolete Germantown school near Washington and Grove sts.

WOODEN FIRE ESCAPES

As a result of the survey made by the Boston American it was learned that the Germantown school, which is made entirely of wood, with the exception of the foundation has wooden fire escapes.

One of these wooden fire escapes is on the northern end of the building and is enclosed with wooden sides. The other is at the rear and is a zig zag structure that would quickly disappear in a fire.

A petition is now being circulated in the West Roxbury district by members of Germantown Citizens' Association for the abandonment of the Germantown school on the ground that it is a fire trap, especially in view of the wooden fire escapes.

In its petition the Association says it regards the wooden stairways as a violation of existing building laws and officials of the organization say they believe such fire escapes would not be permitted on private property.

Among the women actively engaged in circulating the petition are Mrs. Ruth Stanek, Mrs. Helen Cronin Mrs Harry S. Nay, Mrs. Lena Rheaume, Mrs Mary Rheaume and Miss Helen Rheaume. They all are of the opinion the school should be closed at once.

CAMPAIGN PRAISED

Arthur L. Stanek of 8 Bungalow rd, West Roxbury, vice-president of the Germantown Citizens' Association, said

"The members of the association are very much interested in the Boston Evening American campaign for more and better schools.

"We will have another meeting soon and a committee will be appointed to take action.

TOMORROW — Another article about Boston's school needs.

STORE THIEVES TUNNEL INTO BOSTON SHOP

Garments Worth $780 Taken Away Through Hole in Cellar Wall

Thieves tunneled into a store at 60 Causeway st., early today, and motored away with a large and varied assortment of men's and women's garments, valued at $780.

They first forced an entrance at the rear of the building at 3 Billerica st North End, went to the cellar and there pried bricks out of a wall, opening a hole large enough to climb through with ease.

Entering the cellar of Hattie's Specialty Shop, they went up through a trap door to the street floor and made their haul.

It is believed three or more were in the gang and that they passed the goods from the shop to the cellar, through the hole in the wall and to the rear of the Billerica st place where a truck waited.

They evidently worked fast in spite of the fact that they made a skilful selection of the choicest goods from the stock of the specialty shop

Included in the loot were 31 assorted scarfs, 24 printed scarfs, 36 crepe de chine scarfs of assorted colors, 75 pairs of men's socks, five dozen pairs of fishnet silk hose, six men's heavy knit sweaters and four navy sweaters without collars, 20 dozen pairs of gunmetal ladies' hose, 15 dozen pairs of other hose, 10 suits of pajamas, 15 dozen handkerchiefs and 15 ladies' handbags.

SLUMP 'MENTAL' SAYS EXPERT

The present business depression is "purely mental," it was declared today in the Hotel Statler by Dr. William T. Foster of the Pollak Foundation for Economic Research, speaking before the 18th annual convention of the Association of Governmental Officials in Industry.

"It is not only mental," said Dr. Foster, "but it is a silly depression and would be over in two months if the people of this country would decide that it should end.

"We have everything in this country that should create prosperity, and if it were not for the mental attitude of the people, prosperity would be here now and the depression would not have occurred. The depression was brought on purely through fears, and it will end with same.

"We have a surplus of gold in this country," she said, "and our banking policies must be toward raising the purchasing power of the people in all countries

"I think wage cuts are a serious business and have resulted in decreased purchasing power. I think that policy is wrong. If we take it out of labor, we are purely complicating the problem."

Russia, at present is a serious challenge to capitalism, Edwin S. Smith, research director and economist assistant to A. Lincoln Filene, told delegates to the convention.

"A drastic approach to the problem of open production" he said, "is the one followed by United Russia. Measured by the amount of employment which Russia has been able to maintain in the face of the world-wide depression, it would seem to be the most successful approach yet tried.

"It is difficult to know how far their approach can be absorbed into the capitalistic system without completely altering that system.

Men Are Greatest Buyers of Candy; Best Customers

Men outnumber women as candy buyers and are not half as much trouble with the salesgirls. Men cater to the bitter, nutty, chewy and salty types of sweets, while women buy the fudges and softer candies in large quantities.

Men like cinnamon, licorice and the more pungent tastes in candy, while women still cling to fudges, the rich creams and dainty selections of sweets for bridge and tea parties.

Mrs. Ora H Snyder president of the Associated Retail Confectioners of the United States revealed these facts at their 14th annual convention at the Hotel Statler

FATHER'S LETTER TO MRS. SANBORN CALLED HER A 'LOAFER'

BOOMED FOR PRESIDENT

MRS. SCHRADER MRS. POOLE

Mrs. Poole is candidate for president of the General Federation.

DISARMAMENT SUICIDE, SAYS MRS. POOLE

Federation Speaker Says No Nation Is So Envied and Hated as U. S.

By NANCY BREWSTER

Disarmament of the United States would mean certain annihilation by our countless enemies abroad, in the opinion of Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, second vice-president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and a recently announced candidate for president.

In an interview at the annual convention of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs at the Ocean House in Swampscott Mrs. Poole decried the attempts of anti-militarists to scrap our armaments.

"No nation in the world is so envied and disliked as the United States," Mrs. Poole declared, "and it would be national suicide to abandon our lines of national defense while we are the target for malicious slander in every corner of the world.

SPEAKS FOR FEDERATION

"I know that I speak for the General Federation when I say that we are absolutely opposed to national disarmament. It is ridiculous to suppose that the nations of the world would follow the lead of the United States if she scrapped her armies and navies."

For the first time Mrs. Poole admitted there was dissension in the ranks of the federation over enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"I am informed that at least 15a per cent of our membership is in favor of a change in the prohibition law," she said.

Today for the first time the Massachusetts federation sponsored departmental conferences at a state meeting.

The second day of the three-day meeting opened with concurrent sessions of the State department and special committees featured by round table discussions led by the chairmen and directors.

EXPERTS HEARD

Prominent speakers on these particular topics were being heard in all parts of the Swampscott hotel when reports of the afternoon session on American citizenship, public welfare and co-operation with war veterans presented experts on the various subjects.

At the close of a mass conference Mischa Tulin gave a demonstration of theremin, the ether wave instrument which at the exhibition recently Frank W. Wright reports can produce some of the effects of Mozart and was used in the children's hour on Tuesday in Boston.

WARNED HER TO STAY AWAY FROM HIM

Communication Is Sprung as Surprise to Actress Battling to Break $1,000,000 Will

A surprise letter, denouncing his daughter as a "loafer," and admitted in evidence as the handwriting of John Walcott Natick shoe pioneer, was introduced in Middlesex court today by counsel for Walcott's $1,000,000 will that Mrs. Madeline Walcott Sanborn seeks to break.

Mrs. Sanborn, former Princess actress, daughter of Walcott and now a resident of Brookline, charges undue influence on the part of her sister, Mrs. Grace Forbush of Natick, when she was left only $12,000 in trust while Mrs. Forbush and a brother received the bulk of the estate.

"All your life you have been a constant and serious anxiety to me," the letter read following the salutation "M. F." that Mrs. Sanborn admitted today was for "Madeline Florence" her father's usual salutation in his letters to her.

TOLD HER TO KEEP AWAY

"I am so old now that I cannot and will not stand any more trouble from you so I say keep away from this country and from me."

Mrs. Sanborn admitted today that she was in Europe at the time the letter was dated, but denied she ever received such a message.

Why not seek some decent employment and try to make something of yourself and not be a loafer all your life.

ADMITTED ESCAPADES

"He who doth not work, shall not eat," it concluded.

Upon cross examination she admitted many youthful escapades [illegible] when she was in her teens.

Her [illegible] refused interference of boarding school authorities from being signed an anything [illegible] expense trip with another boy and girl her engagement to a man [illegible] began upon payment of a note, but she specifically denied [illegible] Sanborn's heroes.

After rowing for hours they got no farther than Easton Light and finding the water too rough rowed back to Fort Warren. At the fort Scolaro used 10 cents his mother had given him for grass seed to telephone a neighbor and then they started back to Town river, where they arrived at 4 a.m.

Just as they reached their destination Scolaro fell overboard and swam ashore. McKenzie docked the dory which belongs to his father, and slept in [illegible] fearing to disturb his parents, slept on burlap bags in his cellar.

A Thrilling Serial of Post-War Love, Romance and Intrigue

By FAITH BALDWIN

Surprise Comes to Delight

By FAITH BALDWIN

SOMEHOW Mary Lou hadn't expected Delight to look like this—a little unkempt, a little uncared for, hard, as Larry had said, and appearing even more than her age. Her only beauties were the quantity and quality of the touched-up hair and carefully tended skin and the small rounded figure.

They sat down in the uninteresting, rather dark sitting room. A pot of coffee stood on the table on a tray.

"I was just getting an evening-out," explained Mary Lou's hostess. "Will you join me?"

"No, thank you—"

"No—"

Diana lighted one, poured the coffee, started in some dream and sat back in her big chair.

"What did you wish to see me about, Miss Thurston?" she asked.

Mary Lou leaned forward. The other woman looked at her, observing the well cut suit, the small white scarf, the sheer stockings, the shoes; observing, too, the great sapphire on Mary Lou's slender hand. The girl was evidently very well off. She was simply but expensively dressed and she was very pretty. Under the close fitting almost brimless hat the red-gold hair rioted in small, entrancing curls. The blue eyes were serious and brilliant and the round cheeks flushed with a natural color, the color of nervousness and excitement, for Mary Lou had gotten out of bed that morning to view a very pale little face in the mirror.

What on earth did the child want? Perhaps she wanted to go on the stage, had heard of Diana had money, wished to buy herself a job? If that were the case, mused the older woman, she'd discourage it, money or no money. She was a fair judge of character—she had to be—and if she knew anything about girls, this small, eager, honest looking little person was too pretty and too sensitive to last long in that dog-eat-dog profession.

"Well?" she prompted.

Mary Lou took the plunge.

"Miss Harford—" she said.

"What?" Delight set down her coffee cup with a miniature crash. She was startled, curious, but not particularly annoyed. "Now where did you learn that, I wonder?" she mused aloud. She had quite forgotten telling Larry Mitchell. Was it possible that this youngster was a relative or something? Delight rather hoped so. She liked her.

"Larry told me," said Mary Lou.

"Larry? Oh, the red headed press-agent lad—nice kid. But why should he tell you?" asked Delight.

"It's a long story," said Mary Lou, rather desperately, "I'll have to tell you from the beginning. It's about—Travers Lorrimer."

Delight Harford looked down at the seal ring she wore.

"Travers? But Larry is dead," she said slowly.

"No," she managed to say quietly, "no, he's not dead. Please, Miss Harford, may I tell you in my own way?"

"Yes. Wait a minute. Not dead? Not dead. My God, if I had known that " said Delight Harford. She was ashen white with shock.

"Go on. What about him? I won't interrupt."

"I'll have to start with me," said Mary Lou, youthfully. She told Delight something of her background, her circumstances, the removal of her aunt and uncle to the Orient, of her necessity for finding employment. Presently she came to Lorrer and the advertisement in the paper and her journey out to Westmill to the place called Westwood House, and her disappointment in learning the mistake, the ommission in the advertisement, and of her first encounter with Lorrimer.

"You see, he thought I was—you. He—he wouldn't let me go. And he was so ill, so distressed, that his mother and doctor decided I must stay—and play a part—your part."

Delight looked at her blankly. She was past astonishment. Suddenly, with an odd murmur, she rose and left the room. Mary Lou sat quite still waiting. Oh, he couldn't care for this woman; he couldn't! But he had. And perhaps memory and loyalty would hold . . .

Delight came back. She had with her a small snapshot. It had been taken on that last leave of Lorrimer's. It showed them standing together in some pinewood or other, showed the laughing boy Mary Lou had never known, shown a small, slender girl by an airplane.

Mary Lou held it in her hands. Here was proof, if proof were needed.

"You do look," said Delight Harford, very miserably, "much as I used to look . . . so long ago."

Mary Lou laid the picture down on the table and went on.

"So I prayed," she said, "and because he thought I was you, because I brought back to him playing your part, a new interest in life he—he changed. He's well now," said Mary Lou, with a certain pride. "He's splendid!"

Tomorrow—What does Delight Harford decide to do when told that Travers Lorrimer was not killed in the war?

SLOW DOWN AND LIVE LONGER

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

WITHIN the past decade, statistics show an increasing mortality rate in the United States for persons of the age of 40 and over. This is an unpleasant fact To be sure can we attribute this increase?

There is no doubt it is due to negligence on the part of individuals The emergency has persisted in spite of warnings in youthful years. Even though certain ailments have been known to exist, their victims have neglected to visit their doctors at regular times.

Our modern mode of living tends to decrease the average span of life rather than to increase it. Overeating of rich spicy foods, and foods rich in protein, such as meat, fish, fowl and eggs, contribute greatly to chronic disorders of the body. In temperate quantities these foods are most desirable, but their overeating is a great mistake.

It has been said of the American people that they are overstimulated and excessively emotional. Continued emotional excitement, with prolonged mental strain, does more damage to the human mechanism than many infectious diseases.

We are endowed with all the means of enjoying full life and pleasure. This can be attained only by carefully planned and regulated life. When this fact has been carefully impressed upon all people there will be an increase in the average span of life.

Answers to Health Queries.

K. R. Q.—I am not underweight. I eat plenty of food and have proper rest, but I am always tired and listless and nervous most of the time. What would you advise?

A.—This may be due to autointoxication or abnormal blood pressure. Have the latter tested, so that definite advice and treatment can be outlined. If there is tendency to sluggish elimination this should have first attention.

Gloves to Go With Gown

BY PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, May 20.—Gloves go hand in hand with the mode these days. The smartest custom now seen are those that go walking with their own gloves created of leather combined with the fabric of the accompanying outfit. A smart fashion but like so many other smart things, frightfully luxurious. But perhaps later on when this idea becomes better known clever dressers cateing to the average shopper will offer matching gloves with the costume, quite as a matter of course.

It is certainly a most attractive novelty and indicates how important gloves have become in the sartorial scheme of things although one does not see so many gloves worn at night with evening clothes. In the meantime the leading glovers here have formed interesting alliances with the leading designers and work with them in creating new and original gloves with special costumes.

MARRY-GO-ROUND--ON THE GRILL

By HELEN ROWLAND.

YOU MAY convince a man that he is no Adonis—but never that he hasn't plenty of sex-appeal, no matter what his mirror tells him.

* * *

If curves and plumpness are really coming in again, the divorce lawyers had better start saving their pennies before the slump begins. A nice layer of upholstery seems to pad a woman's nerves and help her calm and assured and peace loving. A FAT woman in Reno is a curiosity.

By marrying a man you merely make an ex-bachelor of him. It takes two or three years of special training to smooth off the rough edges, add the finer touches and turn out that finished product—a husband.

* * *

Poor man! First, it's his mother, trying to stuff castor oil down him, then it's his teacher, trying to cram an education into him; then it's a girl, trying to wish marriage on him; and, finally, his wife, trying to stuff spinach down him.

* * *

Making an effective exit, whether from the last scene of a play or from the last scene of a love affair, is one of the Fine Arts of life.

* * *

What with platinum hair, face-lifts, Florida sun-baths and Paris clothes, it costs a man more to keep his wife in repairs these days than it does to keep his car in repair.

* * *

The average man is married when he is off his guard or under a hypnotic spell, and it's pretty hard for him to forgive the woman who took that advantage of him.

* * *

Bachelors no longer find life so exciting. It has reached the point where a man has to be tied to one woman before he can extract any kick out of making love to another.

Many a man stops loving his wife so gradually that he never finds it out unless she happens to accuse him of it.

No Business of Others if Mate Beats Her!

By WINIFRED BLACK

WAY down in Baltimore the other day, where they say, "o-all" and pronounce round, "ra-ound

Winifred Black

-way down in Balt more where ingo eat terrapin, and soft shell crabs and canvas back ducks just as we poor ordinary people eat corned beef and cabbage and down in Baltimore where everybody has a grandfather, and knows who he was and where he came from, and who his grandfather was, too—well, what do you think? Way down in that blessed Baltimore they arrested a man for beating his wife, and a fine gentle Baltimore judge sentenced this man to receive a horse-whipping at the whipping post.

The man's relatives went to the Judge and begged for mercy, and chief among the relatives was—if you please—the woman the man had beaten.

She said she loved the man and she couldn't bear to have his pride hurt by a public whipping.

She had she didn't have him arrested and would never have thought of such a thing.

It was the neighbors, the prying, busy body neighbors who called in the police, and she'd punish them to mind their own business.

If she wanted to take a beating from her husband she was going to take it in front of all the Paul Pry neighbors and busy home folks on her side of the world.

It's true then—the old legend of the woman who likes to be beaten.

I never really believed it myself and why?

It always sounded like some weird tale of horror out of ancient days of ignorance and cruelty—but there it is right down in Baltimore.

He is said, however, that the name of the wife-beater shows very plainly that he had not lived in the State of Maryland very long.

I doubt if either he or his wife will live there very much longer.

I don't believe that the Old Blue Hen's Chickens will ever get used to the idea of wifebeating as a favorite indoor sport, do you?

No. I'm sorry for the woman who was beaten

The second time the same man beats the same woman—it's the woman's fault. She deserves the beating for staying for one hour with such a man

Maybe she deserved the beating maybe she was sly deceitful and bitter tongued, taunting—but in that case she wasn't worth the trouble of even a good, hard slap, was she?

And the fact that she would take a beating and forgive it doesn't appear to make her very much worthwhile either, does it?

But Maryland—of all places, Maryland, My Maryland—why they'll be burning witches at the stake in Richmond, Virginia, next

She Can't Talk to Boys

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Although my parents are quite strict, I manage to get out sometimes. You may think I am being disloyal, but it's disgusting to have to stay home all the time and not have friends. Now when I do go out with men I just get tongue-tied and can't think of anything to say. At first I thought it was because I hadn't quite got used to going with boys, but now I realize I can't talk except with a few I know very well. Please let me know the best way to overcome being tongue-tied. And also what should I do about my parents? I'm 18 and a high school graduate. A. G. F.

Dear A. G. F.: I hope every strict parent who reads this girl's letter will take the lesson to heart. If you won't allow your daughters a certain amount of reasonable liberty, they'll take it. And it is much better for you to let them invite their young friends to their homes where you'll have a chance to look them over, than it is to refuse and have the girls meet Tom, Dick and Harry on the street corners. I do hope Mrs. G. F. will consider the highly dangerous course she is pursuing in sneaking out without her parents' knowledge or consent. As for being "tongue-tied," time will overcome that

Sorry He Left Home

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am 29 years old and my husband is six years my senior We have been married three months. He seems to be very fond of me, but he tells me he is sorry he ever got married and left home. And yet he can't find fault with my housekeeping What can you advise? A. C. B.

Dear A. C. B.: Your husband doesn't seem to know when he's well off—he's very fond of you, finds no fault with your housekeeping, and still he's sorry he ever left home. Some people wouldn't be happy in Heaven; I'm afraid he's one of them.

ASK LEAVE OF YOUR HOSTESS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN.

1. Will you please tell me how I should inform a guest (from another city) who is visiting a mutual friend that I am entertaining in her honor? Do I ask permission of her hostess first?

2. When entertaining at a luncheon for my daughters, 12 and 15 years of age, should the young guests keep their hats on?

3. When having a bridge luncheon, does not keep the hat on during both luncheon and bridge?

4. Does the hostess at these affairs wear a hat if the party is held in her own home?

DOUBTFUL.

1. Yes, it is the courteous thing to ask permission of the hostess of your friend. She will want to make date-arrangements for the entertainment of her guest, and we should ask her permission as soon as we can, so that she may.

2. This is pretty young for this formality. I am sure that these young ladies would prefer to take off their hats i- And they should do this.

3. Yes

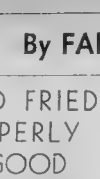
4. —The is for the hostess to decide. Formal hostesses often wear their hats, this custom having come from England and the continent. But very often the hostess does not wear her hat, and she need not if she doesn't wish to

FOOD FRIED PROPERLY IS GOOD

By MARTHA LEE.

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

"AND NO fried foods," possibly is added to your diet list, and dates back to the era when "fried foods" meant tough fat - soaked viands that had been allowed to simmer in a frying pan, surrounded by a shallow amount of grease.



Martha Lee

To be literal frying and deep-fat frying are not the same method When we cook for foods prepared in our frying pan, the professional chef tells us that we should use the word "sauté" instead of "fry." Modern sauteing—and I am very much tempted to call it frying—is done in a dry pan, or one in which the very smallest amount of hot fat or oil is used.

If your pan is hot enough, there are few foods that will stick to it enough to do it any harm. The browning is done quickly and in order to achieve a golden brown crust, the surface of the chops, fish, or whatnots should be as dry as possible

CREAMED TOMATOES AND CHEESE

- 3 large tomatoes
- 4 tbsps. fat or oil
- 3 tbsps. flour
- 1½ cups lightly milk or ⅔ cup evaporated milk and ¾ cup water or
- 6 tbsps. powdered milk and 1½ cups water
- 1 tsp. salt
- Speck pepper
- 6 tbsps. grated cheese
- 3 hard-cooked eggs
- 6 slices buttered toast
- Parsley

Wash, stem, and cut the tomatoes in halves crosswise. Dip in seasoned flour, then saute in the hot fat or oil until golden brown on both sides and tender. Arrange on the toast in the center of a platter. Then add the flour to the fat left in the skillet, stir until smooth, and next add the milk gradually and the salt, pepper, and grated cheese. Cook gently, still stirring until smooth. Add the eggs which have been shelled and sliced and when hot pour over the tomatoes. Garnish with parsley and serve. Serves 6.

NEW ENGLAND POWER INDEX POINTS UP

By FRANK H. MELOON

Study of the power takings of 142 New England companies which are customers of the New England Power Assn., reveals a steady, though slow, rise since the first of the year. Three companies represent about 8 per cent of the power load of the Association. Woolen and worsted activities have shown the best gains. Cotton textiles improved. The rubber industry showed a step-up. Paper companies have also been little changed but metal industries have shown betterment.

Building permits issued in Massachusetts during April exceeded in value by more than two million dollars those granted in March, according to figures reported by the freight traffic department of the New Haven Railroad from the monthly survey of S. W. Straus.

The State's total building permits for April were valued at $6,169,401, as compared to the total for March of $10,893,8?3 in March. Sharing in the increase were nine of the thirteen cities which are reported upon individually in the survey. They were Boston, Brockton, Fitchburg, Holyoke, Lowell, Pittsfield, Quincy Springfield and Worcester

Professionals who have succeeded in intimidating the weak investors and speculators into throwing their stocks overboard are maintaining the downward move in prices are now ready to make their clearings. Just what economic benefit this is to a country struggling out of an embarrassment which many business leaders say they are unable to see, and many of the country's foremost economists emphatically agree with them.

* * *

The reason that sentiment plays such a large part in stock trading is that by far the greater number are outside traders whose interest has nothing about the fundamental conditions upon which security prices are based. They were chief among hundreds who, following the leader policies and are ready to credit a calamity every time they were to grasp a roac-head forecast the day before.

These traders and investors can be led much easier than rushed and they are never so happy as when prices are going up. They will indulge in short selling now and then to be profitable but it is much rather tolmes the prospect is higher than lower.

Financial condition of the stock public interest and the next step to would be improvement in secondary issues.

Some Dividend Rumors Given

One large New York and Boston investment banking house says "do not."

"It was rumored that General Electric would cut its dividend to a $1 annual rate Friday. Warner Bros.' break emphasized the poor outlook for all the motion picture companies and the individual troubles of Fox and Warner. Price-cutting at theaters here and in other large cities is expected soon. Stone & Webster dividend is due today and there is expectation it will be paid at the 82 basis. Hudson Motor is expected to explain the present rate for another quarter."

Sears Roebuck's Sales Gain

Within a few days Sears Roebuck will publish its sales for the month ended May 21. Trade observers will be shown in the figures because in some quarters it is anticipated that they will show business catching up with last year. This is especially so showing made in the preceding four periods of four weeks each, which recorded decreases of 15.5 per cent., 15.3 per cent, 6.8 per cent and 5.8 per cent, the latter for the period which ended April 25. Further progress toward reducing the decline would be considered significant.

New Haven's Place in the Rail Field

Many believe that the New Haven is in a better position than most railroads, probably because New England appears to be doing better industrially than most other sections of the country. Although net earnings for the first quarter were 85 cents a share, against $1.31 a year ago, it is pointed out that the first three months are always poor and an improvement in earnings would be logical in the future.

United Fruit Is Attracting Attention

Some attention is being attracted to United Fruit as a result of one firm pointing out that the stock yields around 6 per cent and is evaluating at less than 80 per cent of its book value. It is contended that latter condition is of real importance because of the firm's calculations on a per acre basis for thousands lands and fleet tonnage indicate that the company is carrying the value at prices of only one-third of the duplication costs, even in the present disturbing conditions.

Foreign Is a Word With Two Meanings

Mention of Consolidated Gas as a favorite of foreign buyers recalls that this word has two meanings. In connection with "Gas" it means buyers outside the United States. In utilities, however, "foreign" is often used as meaning outside large centers. Thus the truly American districts which make up certain Boston suburbs were referred to in current chain store article as "foreign."

Consolidated Gas Is Utility Leader

As in the past, Consolidated Gas of New York demonstrated its ability as a leading issue among the utilities were stepping forward. This issue is said to be the favorite American utility among foreign buyers.

Leadership of "Gas" in declines, as well as rallies, indicates that at present the trading is more of the professional, I get variety than anything else.

STEEL REVIEWS FIND OUTPUT IS SAGGING

New York, May 20. In line with seasonal tendencies in the industry, the steel reviews today report a decrease in ingot operations during the past week.

Iron Age said the market was drifting and that although output was unchanged in most centers it has sagged at Pittsburgh, sending the national average down 2 points to 4th per cent of capacity. Steel estimated the decline at 3 points to 44 per cent.

"Automobile production apparently passed its spring peak," said the latter review, "and turned down moderately in the past week. Assembly is definitely lower; current steel requirements reflect this phase, having had a sharp rise in the spring, it is believed the automotive industry will not experience an abrupt reduction, but rather a slowly subsiding trend."

Iron Age found that actual shipments were only fractionally lower than in April but that new business was sagging particularly from the automobile trade. Constructive action by Congress was also only outlet promising early expansion.

BEAR PRESSURE IS CONTINUED IN WALL ST.

New York, May 20—Bearish pressure was continued in today's trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The forenoon rally was checked by selling in the afternoon when bears hammered at American Telephone and the Can issues.

There was spotty rallying attributed to short covering around the close.

RAILS PUSHED UP

Selling of the rails lightened, and carrier shares pushed up 1 to 4 points during the morning, but lost most of their advance later on, as did yesterday.

Southern Pacific, however, pushed up 2 points in the late trading on declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25. The general market nevertheless, closed heavy.

American Telephone was a conspicuous weak spot, this week-held issue selling off 4 more full points in a four-year low, then rallying 2 1/8. Du Pont was also cleared the regular quarterly dividend and brokers could offer no more impetus to speculation. Inaction of the stock than bear pressure and discouraged liquidation by investors.

Continental Can dropped 4 points on an adverse earnings report, and American Can nearly as much. Coca Cola tumbled more than 8 points in a thin market.

Miscellaneous issues off 3 to 5 included Allied Chemical, du Pont, Eastman and American Water Works. Fox Film sold off 2 points and motors was heavy. General Motors and Chrysler losing more than a point.

U. S. STEEL UNCHANGED

U. S. Steel, after an early gain of 2 points, sagged for a time but closed unchanged.

Liquidation of the motor shares seemed to be partly in response to the weekly, steel trade review which pointed to the conclusion that the spring peak in automobile output is being reached.

"Iron and steel shares had been at a slackening in steel requirements of motor producers, and that prices were uncertain. It stated production had contracted from 47 to 45 per cent of capacity, while "steel estimated it at 44 per cent. Perhaps the most pronounced slackening in steel output out since April.

Freight car loadings, as reported for the week ended May 9 showed a decline of 27,842 from the previous week, although an upturn usually experienced at this season.

The weekly petroleum statistics on the crude runs, were considered encouraging. The daily average out put of crude oil last week showed a drop of 61,000 barrels from the preceding week, and the wide contraction of 191,100 from the corresponding week of last year. There was also a moderate reduction in gasoline stocks in storage.

There are yet no definite signs that the sag in petroleum prices has reached bottom, but Harry F. Sinclair, president and chairman of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Co. at their annual meeting today said believed prices were approaching bottom.

Call money again renewed at 1½ per cent, but was abundantly available in the outside market at 1. Funds continued to flow into high grade bonds, which is said to be the chief objective of the cheap money policy.

Hardware Sales Are Slowed by Weather

New York, May 20—Unseasonal weather hit much trade of the country last week, causing a slowing up of the general wholesale demand for hardware and allied products, says Hardware Age today. Current volume at best had only been fair, in spite of the abnormally low retail stocks reported everywhere. It is generally believed that a good spell of warm weather will stimulate more substantial business, particularly for spring lines.

All-Electric Plan for British Rails

Washington, May 20—Complete electrification of all British railroads over a period of 20 years at an estimated cost of approximately $1,580,000,000 is favored by the special committee, headed by Lord Weir, in its report to the British Government, the Department of Commerce is advised by Trade Commissioner William L. Kilcoin at London.

Bank Offers Lowest Melrose Loan Bid

Melrose awarded to Merchants National Bank of Boston, at 1.83 per cent, $300,000 loan, due $100,000 November 16 and $200,000 December 15. Other bidders were: Faxon, Cade & Co., 1.85 per cent; Salomon Bros. & Hutzler, 1.88 per cent; First National-Old Colony Corp., 1.91 per cent; Bank of Commerce & Trust, 1.925 per cent; Shawmut Corp., 1.86 per cent, and S. N. Bond & Co., 1.78 per cent plus $4.

Grains Are Steady in Chicago Market

UNDIPPED CRIMSON MEETS UNBEATEN CORNELL AND SYRACUSE

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Tinker, Evers, Chance. ↑ May Night Boxing.
How Cubs Miss Them. ↓ On Cayuga's Shore.
Winter Dope Agley. 3 Unbeaten Crews.

Pete McManus, Cornell's "Old Man River"

DID YOU ever ponder on how a Name associates itself with a thing? Take baseball clubs for instance. When you think of Detroit you think of Ty Cobb. Mention Pittsburgh and the Pirates and immediately that bowlegged wonder, Honus Wagner, looms upon the screen of the mind. You can't think of the Giants without recalling the peerless Matty. With Brooklyn it's Nap Rucker, poet of pitching motion. Can you think of the Red Sox without Harry Hooper or Duffy Lewis intruding? Or the Braves, without little Rabbit Maranville cap perched cockily on his head, smiling at you? With the Yankees, it always will be Babe Ruth. When you think of the Cubs three chattering, snarling, scrapping players flash on memory's screen—stubby Joe Tinker, lean Johnny Evers and husky Frank Chance. That Tinker to Evers to Chance combination is as inalienably associated as Michigan boulevard with Chicago.

Sheckard, Schulte, Reulbach, Brown, Heine Zim and Kling,

THE WINTER Leaguers don't seem to be doing so well. Here are the Cubs, who had it all fixed up to fight it out with the Cardinals for the pennant, fighting their heads off to stay in the first division. And the Reds—where on earth are the Robins? Far, far from the topmost bough in the National League tree, down there in seventh place. Even the Cubs are not looking up sufficiently far to see that look at 'em. Speaking of looking up, there is one team within easy striking distance of the leaders and strong favorite and that's not the pace. Bill McKechnie has the Pirate setup pretty.

Winter League dope never off nohow. The race don't just winter. I never saw the Braves would be in a real tussle at this and the others. They sort of looked like a team of Babe Ruths to enable Boston to stay out front with its mediocre twirling staff. Then Ernie Shibold and Zachary promptly went out and showed the gang there is nothing the matter with the Rustlers pitching, not by the scrubbiest pitch!

Brandt, with six straight victories, is leading the pitchers of both leagues. Both Zachary and Scibold have been tutoring great ball Brandt already has won more games than he did all of last season. Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed that he has grown so great, Brother mine, brother, by mest! Right from the carcass of a roarin' grizzly!

Bet sporting of pitchers they could be up in no Walt Gardner's whole form. He's not high at Wilkinsburg. Can't look for him to feed at Ann Tec Red Sox soon. I Are has not entered a game in his last 7 games at Zet the ump never appeared. Yet behind that great looking the Red Sox could not win one of the three games.

THERE IS no place we would like more to be next week and than on the shores of beautiful Lake Cayuga, near Ithaca, watching those three unbeaten crews, Harvard, Cornell and Syracuse, battling mid Boy, that will be a boat race that will warm the cockles of an heart. Jim Wray is now in charge of the old Harvard Pop Courtney crew down to the Hoosatonic and Saturday to meet Yale and Dartmouth. Some race I wake. You all know how Charlie Wilbur Hubbard grants are going this season and how red man Lee Hicks Starkweather has been sweeping the water. In three-cornered swap on Lake Carnegie next Saturday should be a thriller. Only newspaper Poughkeepsie rest month will there be an aquatic battle has resemble this.

The most interesting of all the oarsmen who will sit in the shell next Saturday afternoon is Pete McManus, who rows No. 5 on Cornell. You'll have no difficulty recognizing him. Like old Uncle Ned of the song, Pete has no hair on the top of his head, the place where the wool ought to grow. Pete is as bald as a billiard ball. On a clear day the sun glistens on his bald pate till it shines like the dome of the State House. Eat, boy, how that 31-year-old Ithacan can handle a sweep!

Up at Ithaca they call McManus "Old Man River." No matter the distance, no matter the pace, old Pete just keeps rolling along. Pete is a former boy, born on the banks of the Hudson. In earlier days he saw the crews training for the Poughkeepsie regatta. Pete used to lay aside the hoe, or drape the reins over the plough and think how nice it would be to go to college and pull an oar for dear old Alma Mammy. Took Pete longer than usual to work his way into Cornell. But there he is and as great an oarsman himself as he ever dreed to dream about.

STASIAK SET FOR TITLE BOUT

By RINGSIDE

Stasiak, Lou of Peoria, and Henri Degiane, world's heavyweight champion, will meet in a ten-round bout for the championship of the world at Comiskey Park, Chicago, on the night of June 20, it was announced today by Arthur Donovan, boxing promoter.

Degiane, becoming a champion, is confident of victory. He believes he will share the purse which has been following mat kings.

Meanwhile Stasiak is training for the bout. He has promised a "surprise" to his admirers when he appears in the ring. He has been training secretly for several weeks and will not show much of the fine points of his mat game as the match goes on. He says he is fit as the year and expects to win the title.

Stasiak says he will not do any clowning tomorrow night. He intends to tend to business and make the most of his opportunity to become champion.

McCoy and Morelli Ready for the Test

Bobbey McCoy, Holy Cross favorite, and Al Morelli of Boston College are ready for their 30-minute bout which is expected to furnish as much action as a football game.

Nick Lutze of Southern California and Louis Leone of France are all set for the semifinal which has a 15-minute limit.

Daro and Dempsey to Promote Wrestling

Reno, Nev., May 20 (INS)—Lou Daro, Los Angeles promoter will join Jack Dempsey in promoting wrestling matches here, it was announced today. The first matches will be staged here on July 5.

MRS. VAN RYN IS DEFEATED

Paris, May 20 (AP)—Henri Cochet, the world's ranking tennis player, today officially withdrew from the French hard court singles championship, leaving Jean Borotra, idol of the crowds of Paris, to protect the title for the United States.

Mrs. John Van Ryn, the former Midge Gladman, was eliminated from the women's doubles. Paired with Mademoiselle Simone Bathe, she was defeated by Mrs. Anne Hogan and Miss Muriel Beamish, 6-4, 6-4.

Jean and Miss Helen Jacobs of France, U. S. Federal Magazine champion, Pere Alvarez and Miss Ryan and Beamish, 6-2, 6-4.

The Van Ryn forces, John and Mrs., defeated Mr. Charles Boussus and Paul Feret, 6-3, 7-5, while Miss Elizabeth Ryan and Jean Borotra teamed to eliminate Signorina Valerion and A. Del Bono, the Italian pair, 6—2, 6—2.

Mlle. Lenglen, Chief of Tennis, defeated Mlle. Bernedine Neufeld and John Olle 6-2, 7-5, 7-5, 4

Miss Ryan and Beamish won a succession of victories from Madame Vlasto Serge and Jean O. Collins, 6—1, 6—2.

69 FOR TURNESA IN $5000 GOLF

Leeds, Eng., May 20 (AP)—Joe Turnesa, who led yesterday's qualifying round in the Leeds $5000 professional golf tournament with a 69, today duplicated that feat for a 36-hole total of 138 and a two-day total of 152.

Smith had an eight at the first hole where he drove out of bounds and then hit top of his ball and drove it into the ground on an attempted recovery. He finished out the first nine courses to get a 37 but went to pieces coming home and took a 38.

Montes could have had a fine score but for four three putt greens. As it was he seemed pleased with his 72 and handed his ball to a youngster sitting on the edge of the green.

School Players Wear Out Home Plate Scoring 20 Runs

One of the greatest rallies of the 1931 baseball season was started at Weston yesterday, when Weston high defeated Beacon school of Wellesley, 30 to 10.

Beacon came from behind in the ninth inning, making three runs and driving the pastime into extra innings with the tennis tied at 16-16.

In the 11th things began to happen. Five runs were chalked up before two men had been retired. Apparently all the fireworks had been set off, but the run-scoring habit was still maining its grip as Weston, aided and abetted by its opponents, tallied 15 times more.

A new home plate has been ordered to replace the one used yesterday which was badly cut by the spikes of the scoring athletes.

Suspension as "Pure" Turned Brouillard to Ranks of "Pros"

This is the third of a series of six articles in which Lou Brouillard, newly crowned New England welterweight and middleweight champion, tells his life story to Jack Conway, Boxing Editor of the Boston Evening American.

By LOU BROUILLARD
(As told to Jack Conway)

My early successes as an amateur boxer made me determined to devote more of my attention to the sport

I worked in the mills during the day and at night I spent two hours training in a dingy gym. Rene Pelquan, my amateur boxing hero, gave me much encouragement and taught me many of the fine points of the game.

There is usually a demand to see 135 pounders in action at amateur tournaments. As a result I received ample opportunity to breeze into action.

In those early days of boxing I relied almost entirely upon my strength and aggressiveness to win. I would parade in close quarters and hammer away with both hands to the head and body until the other fellow dropped.

The strange southpaw does most of his heavy socking with his left hand. I always hit well with my left, but I decided that if I were to develop a powerful right hand sock that I would prove much more successful.

DEVELOPED RIGHT HAND

I mastered a sharp right hook and a stinging right jab. I soon discovered that my opponents began to weaken after I had riddled them with these short, deadly punches. This form of attack was so swift that my ring rivals found difficulty in getting out of the way of it.

All this added to my glory in the ranks of the amateurs. I won 36 bouts and lost three as an amateur.

With each start, I was in better physical condition. I continued to hold my job in the mills, but each night found me in the gym where I punched the bag, skipped rope and boxed.

I can remember at dad once telling me that hungry men make the best workers. They hunger acts as a whip which sends them driving through the tennis ranks.

I was a hungry fighter. I had nothing to fall back on. I had a hunger for a better position in life for money to help out at home. I decided that if I could keep on knocking out each opponent I would eventually get in a position where I could get $50 or so for a bout.

At last time I did not dream of becoming welterweight and middleweight champion of New England and aspiring to meet Young Jack Thompson and a lot of the others.

BRAVES BETTER THAN RATED BY CRITICS

TRIBE HAS CHANCE FOR PENNANT

By JOE CASHMAN

Generous critics in other big league cities are conceding our Braves a chance to finish in fifth place and think they are doing the local team a favor by ranking it so highly.

We're going out on the limb and announce that these critics are greatly underestimating the strength of the native entry.

In our humble opinion, there isn't a single reason why the Tribe shouldn't be rated as a flag or at least a first-division contender, judging from their showing to date.

The Warriors have faced every club in the league except St. Louis and at this writing they are in third place with a record of 16 victories and 10 defeats, which leaves them only two games back of the pace-setting Cards, 1½ games back of the Giants and three full games ahead of the Cubs.

They have taken six out of seven from Brooklyn, two out of three from both the Pirates and Reds, one out of one from the Cubs, three out of six from the Phils and two out of six from the Giants.

In other words, the Braves have done far more than enough to be considered contenders. They haven't received the recognition because the one thing a diamond expert never does is to pick a club to finish in the money the season after it ends up in the second division.

Cards and Giants Only Better Teams

After looking over all the clubs that have visited the Wigwam this season, it is our guess that the only rivals the Tribesmen need to fear are the Cards and the Giants. They have proved superior to all the other clubs and it's a better bet that they will continue to than that they won't.

The Braves have only four winning pitchers, which is not many, but it is two more than Connie Mack had to win the world's championship last season and one of the quartet happens to be Ed Brandt, the best pitcher in either league to date.

The Cubs, one of the teams picked to push the Braves into the cellar, opened here yesterday and despite the fact that McGeehan used five of his second string pitchers, the visitors were turned back 9 to 5.

An eight run rally at the expense of Guy Bush in the very first inning settled the contest much to the delight of the crowd of close to 10,000 fans who booed Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cubs loudly and cheered just as loudly for the other members of the team.

Cards' Boss, Coach Ordered From Field

New York, May 20 (INS)—The St. Louis Cardinals started their game with Brooklyn in an aggressive mood today and the manager and a coach had to be ordered from the field, one in each inning.

Gabby Street, manager, was the first to go. He made a too vigorous protest to Umpire McGrew over Right Fielder Watkins being called out at first in a Brooklyn double-play in the first inning.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Congratulations to the Southern District team upon the winning of their first W. G. A. team match championship. It is indeed refreshing to see the title go to a district other than Central, which has finished at the top in four of the last five starts.

On paper, the Central and Northern districts are both stronger than Southern, but the South Shore aggregation put up a plucky fight to annex its first title. The Southern District captured eight out of nine matches and Lois Winn over Northern at Winchester yesterday clinched the championship.

Although there is no news value to a Miss E. H. Fuller, Jr., victory in team match play, it is news when the many time State champion loses a match.

A few years ago Mrs. Baker was eliminated in the State championship at Kernwood in May, but it was a September before anyone learned that the defending champion was suffering from an attack of hysterics when she met with her downfall.

Mrs. Baker has not been physically fit to play her best golf this season but not a word of complaint has she offered. In fact, when she was confronted with a query regarding her condition, Mrs. Fuller professed to be in the best shape of her career.

With no intention of taking any great credit away from Mrs. Baker's conquerors, it must be admitted that they all were fortunate that the former champion was not at her best. Mrs. Baker is still the outstanding player of the W. G. A. and also the best sportswoman in the association. In fact, she is even a better loser than she is a winner.

The fourth N. E. P. G. O. amateur pro-tournament of the season, which was originally scheduled for the Andover Country Club, has been cancelled and the money chasers and their simon pure partners will gather at the Haverhill C. C. next Monday.

The Woodland Golf Club has gone on record as opposed to the new and lighter ball. Judging from the comments against the new ball, it is not long for this world.

Most of the complaints against the lighter ball have been confined to play through the fairgreens, but from this writer's viewpoint, it is on the greens that the new agate is really unruly.

W. G. A. COURSES HARD

WOMEN URGE CHANGE FOR TITLE PLAY

By BILL GRIMES

For some unexplained reason, the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts insists upon holding its annual championships on the most difficult courses available, such as Brae Burn, Salem, Charles River, Kernwood, Weston and Worcester.

It would be to the advantage of the W. G. A. if it cast aside its false pride and selected courses such as Woodland, Oakley and South Shore to decide their championships. If the title tilts were played on any one of the above mentioned courses, it would eliminate more interest in the championship, develop more confidence in the contestants and work out to the benefit of everyone concerned.

There are no Glenna Colletts, Helen Stirlings, Maureen Orcuttz of Virginia Van Wies in the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts and therefore many of the contestants are made to appear ridiculous by the action of the committee in charge of the selections of championship sites.

Few Players Able to Break 100

During W. G. A. championship qualifying rounds, a very small percentage of the field break 100. Women players take their golf even more seriously than do the men. And, when they are playing Brae Burn, Salem, Worcester, Charles River, Kernwood or Weston, courses which they know, or should realize are far to tough for the best they can offer, they invariably tighten up with the result only a few of the outstanding players are able to make even a creditable showing.

The South Shore C. C. is not as well known as either Woodland or Oakley, but it is in many respects superior to either. To the uninitiated there are far too many blind shots at Oakley, and Woodland has three or four holes which are back-breakers for women.

South Shore is improving annually, and next season it will be in condition to stage a championship and unquestionably the golf committee would gladly sanction the W. G. A. classic being held at their West Hingham layout.

The women who have played the South Shore Country Club are strong for the championship being held at Hingham. In fact, many of them have expressed themselves as favoring South Shore in preference to any other layout in this section. It will be interesting to compare the medal scores of the W. G. A. championship qualifiers at Brae Burn with those of the Southern and Central teams in the final team match of the season at South Shore.

weight championship of the world. Mine was a small world at the time, the mills, the stuffy little gym and the trips to various Connecticut towns to compete in the 135-pound class at amateur tournaments.

SUSPENDED AS AMATEUR

I have since learned that Al Mello was then New England welterweight champion. He had come out of the mills of Lowell to crush Eddie Shevlin. But, in those days Mello's name did not mean a thing to me. He was not one of the boys I was called upon to meet as I battled at the tournaments around the Connecticut circuit.

Then came an investigation of amateur boxing in Connecticut. It was charged that some of the boxers were being paid, that the clubs were conducted for personal profit.

I was determined, however, to continue boxing. I argued that it was probably a good break from fate to be suspended. I must now turn professional to get work in the ring. So I quit my job with the money chasers of the pro ranks.

I started as a preliminary boy and got $25 for my first bout. This barely paid for my training expenses, but I experienced the thrill of knocking out my first opponent in the pro ring.

This success gave me courage. I told myself that after all a pro boxer only made of flesh and bone. If I kept throwing my fists as fast as I could with all of my power behind them, I was bound to succeed.

I was handicapped in the fact I was still obliged to keep my job in the mills. I could not give proper attention to my training, but I did the best I could and was fortunate to keep winning.

Work in the mills became dull at Danielson. I was told that I might do better if I want to Worcester. I didn't have anything to lose and so located in Worcester where I got a job and continued my career as a boxer.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston stepped in to Jim Toland's gym to find Ernie Schaaf boxing with Henry Lamar.

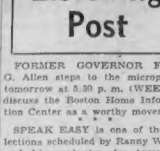
The heavyweights mixed with as much fury as if 20,000 persons, instead of only a handful, were watching them.



Mr. Boston

"Lamar gives Schaaf a good workout," said Lacy.

Schaaf and Lamar punched away for two rounds. Then Jack Dudley stepped into the hot spot.

"What about Maloney?" I queried.

"I'll take care of Maloney," was the hotel reply. "I licked him several times when I trained with him for his New York bouts with Delaney and Sharkey. I would pull away from Jim's right and then nail him on the button with a short right hand smash. And that's the place Maloney doesn't want to get hit.

"You a much better fighter than when I trained with Maloney, while he was probably as good then as now. I have not any secret battle plan for next Tuesday night. I'm going to keep shooting punches from the opening gong. This style of attack will give me a knockout victory inside of five rounds."

Larivee to Return to Boston Ring

"I have signed Leo Larivee of Waterbury, Ct., to meet Sammy Bruce of Buffalo, in one of my 10-round bouts at Braves Field on next Monday night," piped Mack.

"That's a good match," replied Mr. Boston. "I think Larivee is one of the most promising middleweights in the country. He was overmatched when he lost to Shade. It wasn't right to put the 19-year-old Waterbury youngster against such an old war horse as Shade.

"I also like Bruce as a boxer. He showed plenty of hitting power against Johnny Indrisano. That story about somebody threatening Bruce before he entered the ring sounds like the old baloney to me, but the Buffalo warrior can nevertheless fight. Didn't he lick Bucky Lawless who in turn upset Young Jack Thompson?"

"I also have Harry Allen on my card," went on Mack. "I'm going to pick a live one for him today.

"I also have Arthur DeNuh on the card. He will tackle Uncle known Winston of Waterbury in a six rounder."

Daily True Story

It's a mavel that men cant find things to say at home—just read the paper, but I imagine you know all about that. However, the girl was a little actress, I give her credit for that The way she looked up at John would have slayed stronger men. Why . . ."

Mary broke into her rapid-fire of gossip with a firm tone.

John's Cousin

Brought Mirthless Laugh

The busy-body was momentarily nonplussed. Mary smiled triumphantly although her eyes smarted. Then the other woman laughed a mirthless laugh.

"John's cousin! I'll wager you can't tell me the color of her eyes! Mary's cutting edge of sarcasm caused the other still further mirth.

"You're a good sport, Mary, but John isn't worth it. You've likely learned that he lunches across from a pretty face now and then. Men will have their fling. Well, ta-ta, my dear, we must try to tea-room together sometime."

Mary dug her finger-nails into her palms and although she would have denied it, tears stung her eyes and ran down her face. Tears of humiliation and then of Jealousy. She didn't want John to be taking a pretty girl to lunch.

Business Visit

John Explains Girl

"I had a funny experience, today."

Mary's hand clenched nervously. She knew he was leading up to a separation or something and she didn't want to be separated. She liked their cozy little evenings.

"I tried the new tea-room and at another table my new little stenographer was weeping as though the world was coming to an end. So I went over to her table and of course it was a love-problem. It seems she's in love with a young man in town, an automobile-salesman. Bert something-or-other, and they refused his proposal of marriage a number of times so he wouldn't think she was trying to get him and now he's trying to make her jealous by running around with a married woman.

"Tis that. Well I told her I didn't think it would seem over anxious if she asked him how much he'd allow on her family's old car. A strictly business visit, you know." John's clear, honest laugh filled the room. "Strictly business. I can hear the bells gonging, now."

His voice lowered, became endearing. And honey, I saw you riding through town yesterday in a smart new model car with the salesman. Why didn't you tell me you'd like a car? You've always said you'd be scared stiff to drive." He patted her hand. "First thing in the morning we're going down and pick out the snappiest model in the show-room . . . why, honey, what are you crying about?"

"Aren't women funny? They cry if they don't get what they want and they cry if they do. And we silly men love 'em just the same."

Five and Ten

ram down the resistance she put up against largesse from him; but she not only continued to refuse the slightest boon of any sort, but also vigorously resented any attempt on his part to merge her narrow path with what she was fond of terming "the primrose one" of his family.

Sarick was on hand to meet her, and that fat Mr. Hellman, who handed her a telegram from Jenny, explaining Jennifer's influenza and imperative need of change, and which Miss Rarick strongly suspected the fat Mr. Hellman of having maneuvered to send himself, by some such device as wiring a friend in Buffalo to wire back in Jenny's name.

Glad to Miss Her

As a matter of fact, the telegram had actually come from Jenny, due to sharp admonitions from Sarick, but nothing could have suited Miss Rarick better than this sudden and allegedly imperative absence of Jenny.

She was a strange and rather dread person to Rarick. A cold, remote older sister, whose attitude had always been unspoken grievance, and yet who never would permit him, by deed, the only gesture of which he seemed capable, where she was concerned, to remove some of the cause for that grievance.

The fact that Jenny and Hildegarde were congenitally uncongenial, Rarick's common sense had long since, after those first two harrowing weeks she had visited them when they were bride and groom in St. Louis, led him to accept without hope of retrieval.

But subsequently, Rarick considered that he had done everything possible, so far as his responsibility to this narrow, stupid husband and lady was concerned. Even in the first years of his rise to prosperity he had urged her to give up her teaching and live on the income he was beginning to be so well able to afford her.

The night she arrived, and sat with Sarick in her high-neck black silk, a turquoise four-leaf clover her sole jewel, Rarick, visualizing his glittering Jennys in their places at his dinner table of point-lace and gold plate, felt a surge of bewilderment.

Smug and Joyless

Hildegarde was as hedged in by her grim principles as Jenny was by her lack of them.

"I think," she told her brother at the conclusion of a long meal devoted to the discussion of the Kansas coal strikes, closed shop conditions in Keokuk, the Protestant vote and a pointed dissertation on lax youth, "that I shall take a bus first thing tomorrow and ride down into the congested districts."

"I'll send some one down with you! Into some of my modern tenements."

"I don't suppose Jenny or the girl has much time to devote to study of that sort of thing."

How smug she was! The mere fact of the omnibus irritated him.

How joyless she was! Men digging in subway ditches, women on hospital cots in wards, were jocular in a way she had never been capable of in her life.

"That is how I shall spend tomorrow, Rarick. No need for you to bother about me. I shall take an omnibus down to the congested districts."

He looked at her and felt that his laughter came like a boy.

"Why not the Second Avenue surface car?" he suggested And then to himself, "You'll find it much more righteously uncomfortable."

A thought that he confessed to himself was more amusing than really valid, began to turn in Sarick's head during the following two weeks of his sister's visit.

Hildegarde admired Gerkes. Sometimes Rarick respected her of being more interested in Gerkes himself than in his collections, over which she cooed a long, conscientious neck; but she fact remained that she assisted him in various philanthropic work, classified some Eskimo needle-cases and Upper Magdalenian harpoons at his desire, attended those of his lectures before the Anthropological Institute which were open to the general public.

A Grand Idea

Gerkes had countless times given voice to the wear and tear upon himself of these lectures. Gerkes needed leisure, repose of mind, money, isolation. Hildegarde was in part time when the secluded walks of life would be irksome. Gerkes had constantly spoken about his intention of one day seeking out again what to him had been the beauty and the exhilaration of Alaska. Why not? Hildegarde had no youth to shed. Both she and Gerkes, for the matter, were adults about life. If Gerkes was playful about it all, it was partly because his life, not the truth of it revealed to him the unexpected grins, like crevices occurring in terrific masses of granite.

Why not? Given these two people; a dower of a million; facilities; leisure for research. A million for every new truth. Two million! Why not?

Officials Mean Well, but There Must Be No Quibbling in Immediate Changes in 97 Buildings Exposed as Menaced by Flames

THE MENACE

Thousands of children are housed in wooden old shacks and arks of another day. Those buildings have not only outlived their usefulness but are today a positive menace.

But they will not tolerate their children and public education to be tossed about like a football in the political arena or to be employed as a medium for the modern art of buck-passing.

Their health and training are to be predominant factors in the future of this country. They are entitled to grow to manhood without the handicaps which this indefensible condition imposes.

Commissioner Rourke proposes that the danger menace shall be eliminated, IN PART, by constructing fire-escapes upon fifteen of these structures WITHIN TWO YEARS.

Superintendent Burke says that about $1,400,000 will be spent to construct modern buildings. This will amend the intolerable situation, but, again, ONLY IN PART. He could wisely and progressively spend $3,000,000 a year for elimination of these archaic buildings if he had the money.

Mr. Rourke and Mr. Burke are well-intentioned men, no doubt. But it is inadequate and unsatisfactory for them or for others to deplore that the Schoolhouse Commission is responsible for the meager fund for construction of fire-escapes and that the Legislature is at fault for withholding the proper amount to supply modern, adequate school facilities for our children.

The Legislature is in session. These gentlemen should organize their program at once, the school administrators should forego their acrimonies and rivalries and they should together present their needs to Beacon Hill before the session is over and the legislators departed from Boston.

It will not be so easy to find excuses if they pick up their newspapers some afternoon to learn that fine children, dear to the hearts of loving parents, have paid the penalty for negligence that is known to exist today.

Public sentiment will be squarely behind them.

Public sentiment demands that the children of Boston, regardless of whether they live in the aristocratic precincts of the Back Bay or the tenements of Charlestown and the West End, shall have for their education the best that Boston can afford.

The Kaufman Tragedy

The people of New England who grieved with the relatives and friends of Mitchell B. Kaufman will rejoice with them that at least his mortal remains have been found in the Maine woods.

Kaufman was a credit to his family and to his race.

New England needs men of his business capacity, integrity and of his generosity. If it cannot have him, it can at least be glad that the mystery surrounding his untimely death has been eliminated and that his widowed mother can have the satisfaction of offering her prayers at the bier of her son.

"Innocent Fun"

I'M ABOUT to take my place with the dodo as a fossilized old fuss and I don't care a hoot. Hitherto I've been plenty eager to be up-to-date or even a couple of jumps ahead of the current notions. But at last I reneg. This latest fad is too pippity-pip for even my lets-go nature. Here's where Elsie joins the View-With-Alarm Club.

Elsie Robinson

Well, if public pajama parties for high school youngsters is innocent fun, then I'm a sip of cyanide.

Now, mind you, I've nothing against pajamas, per se. I sleep in them, work in them, loaf in them. And I've grown accustomed to seeing cute little tricks scampering to the corner grocery in rose pink panties. For, dresses being what they are, pajamas can't be much more so. So when I heard that the Pajama Party rage had hit our town, and I saw a dozen of our prettiest girls starting off the other night, I wasn't particularly startled.

To be sure, Nice Girls didn't go to public dances when I was 18 . . . specially when they were dressed like a bunch of Bed Time Stories. But just because my youth was practically ruined by having to wear five petticoats, is that any reason why a pretty girl shouldn't enjoy her shape on a warm Spring evening?

None at all. Can't you be broad-minded? You know you're just eaten up with envy. Which, of course, I was. So away went th- kids. And back I went to work, thinking what a lot I'd missed in life.

But I didn't know the half!

'Long about midnight I finished the work, thought I'd go out, take a turn and drop in at the Counter for a cup of coffee. I dropped. I'm still dropping!

The kids were there before me. Pajamas all over the place. Giggly girls—I'd been prepared for them. But what I hadn't been prepared for was the big, gawky boys. Now a funny little boy in his foolish little jams is one of the most touching sights I know.

But a great big hulking farm-sized school boy flopping around in a few thin yards of sky-blue, wrinkled nightie is altogether too touching a sight to let loose on a public restaurant at midnight. Particularly when he and his variously tangled girl friends are all generously lickered up.

And right here, a lot of indignant mamas and outraged prohibitionists are going to say it wasn't so. Very well, bamboozle yourselves if you wish, ladies—but I'm telling you it WAS so. And these were not "herrid boys and girls" in some "touch bootleg joint." These were nice boys and girls from nice families, in a nice town, and the Counter is an eminently respectable place, without a drop of liquor on the premises.

These youngsters were there with the full consent of their parents. Their doting mamas had been sewing on those pajamas for a week. They thought Little Sister looked perfectly adorable in her tangerine crepe de Chine, and that Big Brother was killing in his orchid stripes.

They'd helped them dress, and had gone with them to the dance hall and visited happily through the opening dances. Then, along about 11, they began to nod and yawn, and had gone comfortably home to bed, having warned "the children to be back early."

Well, what do you expect? Are 18-year-old boys and girls itty-bitty-tootsy-wootsies who'll be content with a rosy romp and a bag of lollipops? Or are they red-blooded, mature young humans, with high blood pressure and a lot of ideas?

And if you turn them loose at midnight, garbed in nighties, in close proximity to parked autos and cheap gin—what's the answer? And that's exactly what is being done at public pajama parties al over America this Spring.

New York Day by Day

Many Inventions

NEW YORK, May 20—A few steps below the 34th st. shopping district on Broadway is the storelike office of an enterprising patent attorney. In a glittering electrically lighted window are the material manifestations of inventive dreams from all over the world.

Inside are rows upon rows of ponderous records, and at a flat topped desk sits the attorney, who meets the potential geniuses with their practical or impractical whatnots.

Almost every othe. person has an inventive idea tucked away in the folds of his mind. Indeed, few are satisfied with just one. And none is so superlatively optimistic as the person athrill with the notion that he will give the world something new.

Most inventors are improvident. They have built up such roseate dreams of great wealth that the money they have on hand seems like so much chicken feed, and they scatter it with the same abandon. The inventor almost invariably thinks in millions. And his life becomes a chaos of disillusionment.

* * *

When a man becomes too absorbed in an inventive idea his concentration is often looked upon with suspicion. He is regarded as one "touched." His habits of dress, his manner of living and often his conversation reveal neglectful sacrifice to a fixed idea.

* * *

* * *

Beatty was born and reared in Chillicothe, O., and is still the type of country boy to be seen in front of the drug store. He began as a circus runaway cleaning animal cages, and at 20 presented the most astounding thriller ever seen the world over. His mother saw his act but once in his home town, and upon this occasion he omitted two of his most ferocious beasts. Even so, she was utterly prostrated for two weeks. He is an engagingly friendly lad, the sort with a nervous smile of agreement before knowing what is said. He weighs 145 pounds and has twice been literally torn to ribbons in the arena. He likes the movies, but spends most of his time reading in his dressing room and wandering about the circus watching other acts. He drinks a single glass of beer now and then, but does not smoke.

* * *

Following a visit with Beatty, I was explaining to Lucy Virginia Long how, alone in the pit, swirhl with snarling and often screaming beasts, he turned their murderous attacks into skulking whimpers. She seemed mildly interested, but, when I had finished, naively inquired: "I wonder what a fellow like that has for delirium tremens?"

* * *

The waggish H. I. Phillips, in commenting on the statement of a movie queen that had she her life to live ever again she would avoid the plaudits of the public, observes: "The delicatessen dealers had a word for it."

It was Phillips, too, breaking out in a rash of modernism, who suggested changing "Lover's Lane" in Central Park to "Arterial Alley." And Joe Laurie, Jr., doesn't mind having insomnia, if he could only get some sleep.

Just Folks

The Past

Who cares what shabby clothes he wore
Five years ago today or more,
Or lingers long to dwell upon
The hardships now forever gone?
Who, safe in port, regrets that he

May envy those who snugly ride
But once within the station door,

No man remains forever sad
Bewailing hardships he has had.
For was the journey rough? The goal
At last achieved delights his soul.
Thus what we fret about today

No one remembers to regret
The difficulties he has met
Along the road; the journey o'er,
The hardships frighten him no more.
Safe home he settles in his chair

What About This Statue?

EPSTEIN'S STATUE, "MADONNA AND CHILD"

Some say that Epstein is the greatest sculptor of many years. Others say he is a manufacturer of monstrosities, exploiting publicity by offending artistic taste, a mere notoriety seeker.

Some of his works, notably a recent thing that he called "Genesis," really unfit to print because of its grotesque ugliness, would doubtless bar him from the Academy in the estimation of all except a few that seem to have a relish for that which is hideous.

The models used by Epstein were a Hindu woman and her child. The feet are unnecessarily emphatic in their size, to put it mildly. Epstein seems to like enormous hands and feet. His latest lady, "Genesis," has a hand at least three times as big as that of the Italian giant Carnera.

Can you see beauty, artistic genius in this statue? If so, you belong to a small and select crowd. If not, you are with the great majority.
